Taking Thing Into Own Hands?

Farmers May Move To Improve Sagging Economy

By OVID A. MARTIN

Washington (AP) — Farmers show signs of taking things into their own hands in an effort to improve a sagging agricultural economy.

There is a possibility that they might score successes which could have far-reaching effects on future federal farm policy and on agriculture's ability to stand on its own feet—with food prices rising substantially in the process.

The key to this self-help effort is an indication that farmers intend to avoid, if they possibly can, the production of a feed grain crop that exceeds market demands. Should they be successful, the results could lead to higher prices not only for these grains but also for livestock—a major source of farm income.

Agriculture Dept. reports indicate that farmers will not plant as much land to feed grains, particularly corn and sorghum grains, as farm officials had suggested If these early reports turn out to be correct, there could be relatively tight supplies of these grains with resultant higher prices.

Such a feed grain situation probably would be reflected in lowered production of beef, pork, poultry, eggs and milk. Such reductions in production usually bring in time increases in retail prices of these products.

The Johnson administration, currently under attack by some farm groups because of a receding farm price and income structure, is worried by the outlook It has been considering steps to encourage a larger acreage of feed grains than farmers are reported planning to plant.

Yet, the administration hesitates because it fears a farmer rebuff and the possibility critics would claim that action to grow more grain this year shows that it is in fact, as some farmers claim, following a cheap-food policy.

Largely because of the elimination of a feed-grain surplus last year and this, prices of these raw materials for meats milk and poultry products have been running about 15% above a year earlier

This advance has put a squeeze on livestock producers particularly on those who buy all or most of their feed Some already are cutting back on production. The Agriculture Dept foresees further cutbacks this year and next, particularly in the case of hogs, broilers, eggs and an evening-out in beef production after sharp increases in slaughter volumes

Downward adustments in the production of livestock products, coupled with strengthening grain prices could brighten the farm price and income situation by the end of the year and possibly all through 1968 and into 1969

This could be a favorable development for the administration. A year from now, when it would be starting a drive to hold the presidency at the November election, Democrats would be troubled far less with a displeased farm vote than would be the case if the election were to be held now.

What effect higher food prices would have on the voting ideas of the far more numerous urban population might be another matter

Sen. Bobby: Regime Is Too Secret

Is Speaker At Editors' Meet

Washington (AP) — Sen. Robert F Kennedy said Saturday night there is too much secrecy in government but endorsed "necessary and fruitful tension" between press and officials as a means to galvanize public opinions.

The New York Democrat proposed release to reporters of documents, cables and reports which bear on the inner workings of government but do not infringe on national security.

Kennedy

The former attorney general and brother of the late President John F. Kennedy criticized some officials' practice of holding background briefings which can be reported but without attribution to any individual. He said this leaves the reader unable to evaluate the news because he does not know its source

Kennedy offered these views in a speech prepared for the closing dinner of the annual convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors

The New York senator said he has no illusions that there can be complete understanding between press and government, adding such rapport is "probably not desirable."

"Those of us in public life often call upon the press to be more understanding, sometimes with justice," he said "But we also know that the day you are unanimously joined in praise of officials or policies—when power is held in awe and skepticism disappears — on that day democracy will begin to wither "

Calling the press "a most powerful and necessary force of democracy," Kennedy said that public debate over policies often creates conditions in which mistakes are prevented

"There is always a tendency in government to confuse secrecy with security," he said "Most of our historic involvement in world affairs has taken place in time of war, when secrecy was imperative We are only slowly adjusting to the reality of continuing conflict and responsibility and accommodating that reality to the necessities of democratic government "

Airy Style For Spring

In keeping with the season, The Sunday Journal and Star greets you today in a new dress.

You'll notice on this page and on Page 1B, the lead-off page of the Capital Section containing the news of Nebraska and Lincoln.

The new dress is one that the editors think will not only be easier for you to read, with its somewhat wider columns, but also one that they frankly hope will catch your eye.

To help it do just that the new dress includes what printers call fine screen cuts—pictures that print with better detail, and wider columns accommodating themselves to the reader's eye span The philosophy is that the newspaper should be attractive as well as informative.

Indonesians Rampage, Rip Chinese

Jakarta (UPI) — A mob of more than 1,000 Indonesian youths, some armed with iron bars, heavy rubber hoses, knives and machetes, attempted Saturday to storm the heavily-guarded Chinese Communist embassy.

Frustrated by Jakarta garrison troops and high walls surrounding the embassy compound, the youths went on a rampage through Chinatown, beating Chinese burning vehicles and ransacking shops

Malik

The violence erupted despite personal appeals by Foreign Minister Adam Malik to students and other Indonesians for calm and restraint in the wake of a massive anti-Indonesian demonstration by local Chinese residents last Thursday.

The worsening relations between Jakarta and Peking were further strained by a demonstration in the Chinese capital last week which denounced the new government of acting President Suharto

A group of Parliament members has submitted a draft resolution calling on the government to break relations with Red China speed up the repatriation of Chinese and take drastic measures to cope with Chinese subversives in Indonesia

(In Sarawak, the chief of staff at military headquarters in Indonesian Borneo said 350,000 Chinese are being deported from the island to China. He said another 100,000 who chose to become Indonesian citizens will remain.)

The attacks by the Indonesian youths sent a wave of fear and tension through Jakarta's heavily-populated Chinese quarter

The embassy was guarded by about 400 troops, backed by two armored cars The soldiers blocked the main road but a number of rioters broke through and reached the embassy Foiled by the wall, they overturned two cars parked outside, set fire to two motorcycles and smashed the windshields of at least a dozen more automobiles

The rioters milled futiley around the embassy building in Chinatown and then raged through the district for hours. At least eight Chinese were severely beaten.

Orbit Craft Piloted by Komarov

Moscow (UPI) — In an attempt to catch up with the United States in the race to the moon, the Soviet Union Sunday launched the first of its "third generation" space ships into orbit with a veteran "space bus" cosmonaut aboard It was the first manned Soviet space shot in more than 25 months

The Soviet news agency Tass announced the solo pilot. Col. Vladimir Komarov, 40, who commanded the world's first three-man space bus in 1964, reported from his new space ship Soyuz-1 (union) that he "feels well"

Komarov

Tass said "a powerful new carrier rocket" launched Soyuz-1 into orbit at 3 35 a m (7:35 p m EST Saturday) in the first nighttime launching by either the Soviet Union or the United States

The launching of Soyuz-1 followed informed reports that the Soviet Union would break its long space gap with a double shot, climaxed by an attempt to exchange the crews of two space ships in mid-orbit.

But Tass made no mention of the second space shot which could come as much as a day or several after the initial launching of Komarov's ship

Soyuz-1's orbital path placed Russia's Baikonur launching grounds under the satellite's position.

The last Soviet manned space shot was by the Voshkod-2 March 18-19 1965 Komarov's space flight marked the eighth manned orbital shot by the Soviet Union compared to the 14 manned orbital shots by the United States

The United States' last put men into space on Nov 11-15 1966

The planned Soviet exchange of crew members from orbiting spaceships was seen as a vital step in the race to put a man on the moon.

The United States may have suffered a setback by the Apollo spacecraft fire which killed three astronauts last January and the launching of Soyuz 1 made Russia the first nation to put its so-called third generation of space ships into orbit

The U S equivalent of Soyuz 1, delayed by the Apollo tragedy may not come until early next year thus giving the Soviets an opportunity of leapfrogging ahead of America once more in the space race

Tass said the aims of the new Soyuz series are —"Testing of the new piloted spaceship

—"Checking of the ship's systems and elements in conditions of space flight

"—The holding of expanded scientific and physical technical experiments and studies in conditions of space flight."

But it gave no hints about the experiments

Westmoreland: Vietnam Is A Go-Look-At-It Kind of War

By Hugh A Mulligan

Saigon (AP)—Dawn was just pinking the cloudless sky over the Saigon River when Gen William Childs Westmoreland awoke in the downtown villa that had once belonged to a French wine merchant He strode purposefully across the compound to his office to see if anything had happened to the war during the night

By 8 a m he was hurtling through the teeming streets in his black, air-conditioned sedan, without benefit of sirens and accompanied only by a jeep-load of nondescript Vietnamese in civilian clothes.

At his side carrying a light brown attache case was Capt Larry Budge of El Paso Tex a Rhodes scholar who until three months ago had commanded a rifle company in the central highlands A year before that he had been studying philosophy and economics at Oxford Now Budge had the remarkable assignment of trying to push a four star general around and keep him on schedule

The best I can do is look unhappy " Budge confided Already the captain was looking unhappy

'Go-Look-At-It War'

"This is a go look at it war " the general said strapping himself into the helicopter seat facing out the open door

Below the brown snaking Saigon River gave way to the sprawling docks of Newport where a half-dozen freighters were unloading the goods of war at America's latest logistical marvel a deep water port in the middle of nowhere

The first stop was Long Binh 18 miles northeast of Saigon headquarters of Field Forces Two which controls the three infantry divisions and several brigades carrying on the war in the rain forests and rubber plantations north and west of Saigon to the Cambodian border

Westmoreland was briefed in great detail on the latest phase of Operation Junction City the biggest American action so far

After a sparse lunch and an unhappy state from Capt Budge he was off again loping toward the helicopter at the half jog gait that helps to keep him in shape on

Fighting Grows Near Da Nang

Saigon (UPI) — A mushrooming battle between U.S. Marines and Communist forces just south of the Da Nang Marine base went into its third day today with mounting casualties on both sides.

Military spokesmen said battlefield reports showed at least 96 Communist had been killed in the fight raging since Friday. Marine casualties have not yet been disclosed but American helicopters flew in and out of the jungled battlefield lifting out the dead and wounded.

The fierce fighting about 18 miles south of Da Nang highlighted an announcement from U.S. headquarters Saturday that it has moved thousands of fresh American troops to reinforce Marines facing an estimated five Communist divisions.

Both sides have been pouring in reinforcements. Artillery and air strikes raked the Communist positions in the battle about 80 miles south of the demilitarized zone. Military spokesmen said the Communists were attempting to maneuver to new positions today while Marines kept up contact in a chase.

North of the border, U.S. jets attacking northeast of Hanoi blew up several sections of the railway linking North Vietnam with Red China. Along the coast, North Vietmanese batteries fired on U.S. and Australian warships in the new ship-to-shore gun duels.

A communique from U.S. military headquarters said a multi-battalion force of soldiers from the U.S. 25th Infantry Division's 3rd Brigade had moved into the southern part of the troubled I Corps area—which takes in the five northern provinces of South Vietnam.

Fast Time Next Sunday

Washington (UPI) — Daylight Saving Time arrives next week, bringing with it some of the usual confusion, contradictions and woes of those who forgot to put the clock ahead.

Things should go more smoothly this year, though, since the government has done all it found possible to impose uniformity on the system.

In effect when the changeover officially takes place at 2 a.m. Sunday, Apr. 30, will be the Uniform Time Act — the culmination of a decades-long fight to bring some kind of order to the time jungle. Whatever success it has will be qualified.

The Uniform Time Act ordered a nationwide one-hour time advance following the last Saturday in April. But it left a loophole through which any state could pass legislation exempting itself from the Daylight Saving Time provision, provided the entire state used the same time.

So far only three states are not going to push their clocks ahead — Michigan, Kentucky and Hawaii.

Nebraska's Unicameral passed a bill early in the session which allows the state to participate in the fast time.

Challenging Senate Role For Morton

Chicago Daily News Special

Washington — Sen. Thruston B. Morton, R-Ky. is doing a "Vandenberg" in the U.S. Senate — deliberately trying to pull the Republican Party toward a more internationalist foreign policy. He has had surprising success so far.

Morton

Morton's power play deeply involves Illinois' two GOP senators — veteran Everett M. Dirksen, the 71-year-old Republican leader in the chamber and Charles H. Percy, 48, a freshman mentioned as a presidential prospect.

The immediate effect of Morton's activities, ironically, is to help President Johnson's proposals for building bridges to Communist nations in Europe.

The ultimate aim is to insure the adoption of Republican platform in 1963 that contains a foreign policy plank in the progressive tradition of the GOP.

The process recalls the successful effort of the late Arthur P. Vandenberg of Michigan to rally GOP votes behind former President Truman's proposals for the Marshall Plan and the North Atlantic Alliance.

Morton has always been internationally minded.

Morton v Dirksen

His current spurt of activity places him at odds with Dirksen, a former critic of the United Nations and other global entanglements.

Morton is looking to the crop of GOP freshmen in the Senate — notably Percy and Sen. Edward W. Brooke of Massachusetts.

The war in Vietnam is complicating Morton's attempt to revise the cold war doctrines of his party because opponents can claim it makes no sense to help the Soviet Union while it's helping North Vietnam kill American troops in Asia.

But Morton is chalking up considerable gains. When the proposed Consular Treaty with the Soviets appeared to be in danger of defeat, Morton rode to the rescue with enough GOP troops to cause Dirksen to endorse the controversial measure.

GOP Leader?

If Dirksen ever leaves the GOP leader's seat, Morton would be a natural choice to succeed him if his bridge-building does not alienate too many conservatives in the 90th Congress.

Morton, 59, has been mentioned as a vice president prospect for the Republicans. Perhaps he has that prize in mind as he plays out his latter-day Vandenberg role.

Gen. Westmoreland (left) visits with paratroopers in an area they had captured the day before.

Westmoreland—Tough, But Fatherly Toward His GIs

the days when he can't fit in a few furious sets of tennis. Along the way he suddenly stopped to chat with two privates putting up a radio antenna on a quonset hut. The GI halfway up the pole didn't seem to know whether to come to some sort of attention, despite the precarious perch, or shimmy down and salute.

In short helicopter hops covering a distance of nearly 100 miles, the general visited the forward headquarters of the U.S. 1st Infantry Division, inspected a new airstrip that the Viet Cong had mined during the night, dropped by the site of a new Special Forces camp, showed up at the command posts of the 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment, the 173rd Airborne Brigade, the 196th and the 199th Light Infantry Brigades, and made an unscheduled stop at an old French fort temporarily occupied by U.S. troops. Sometime during the night a 120 mm mortar round had landed in the camp but failed to go off.

"First time we've had these big ones this far south," Westmoreland said, gazing at the black-finned dud lying in a deep crater surrounded by a knot of solemn faced officers.

At Black Horse

At Black Horse, code name for the abandoned rubber plantation where the 11th Armored Cavalry is headquartered, the general drove down a dusty trail to look at a Japanese printing press captured from a Viet Cong tunnel and questioned the intelligence officers doggedly about a recent ambush that claimed 35 American lives.

Having delivered a mild reproof in a voice almost totally devoid of emotion, the general congratulated the armored officers

As the day wore on, the briefing sites dissolved from huts to tents to jungle clearings until finally the general was sitting on an ammunition box listening to a tall Negro major tell how his battalion planned to cross a jungle river next day and attack a suspected Communist staging area.

The place was Landing Zone Charlie, a scorched and bomb-cratered field of underbrush surrounded by skeleton trees. The 2nd Battalion of the 503rd Infantry, 173rd Paratroopers, had taken the area just the day before.

"How is it son?" Westmoreland asked, moving along the chow line to sample the food and chat with the men.

For all his southern manners and seeming lack of small talk, the general can scarcely conceal his admiration for the high morale of the new generation of Americans fighting their country's most unpopular and least understood war.

"This generation is going to be heard from," he said in fatherly tones that seemed light years away from his cross examination techniques with the briefers. "They've come here from all walks of life, from every possible social background, and been exposed to problems in diplomacy and life and death and nation building that can't help but bring beneficial results to our own country whey they assume their positions of leadership. At 20, they already know more of the complexities of this world than you and I can learn in a lifetime."

At another pained glance from Capt. Budge, Westmoreland hurried off to his helicopter but was suddenly diverted by a reconnaissance patrol heading into the jungles to lay an ambush. The paratroopers were smeared with black makeup, wore black berets and bits of leaves, and were girdled with great bandoliers of machine gun ammunition. The general questioned them at length about the night's operation, kneeling with them around a field map and going over the plan in minute and excited detail.

"What will you do if any of your men smoke?" He suddenly asked the squad leader.

'It Won't Happen'

"It won't happen," the sergeant answered with unflinching assurance. "These men have been up against old Charlie before. They know what the score is."

After that, the patrol headed off to war, down the jungle trail. And the general headed back to his helicopter and another aspect of war.

Contrary to popular legend, the general is seldom bothered at night by hot line phone calls from the Pentagon and never by anxious phone calls from the White House. "I have never spoken to President Johnson on the phone in my life," he said, acknowledging the free hand given him within the diplomatic ground rules of his complex command.

On the way back to his villa in the black sedan, the general stared out the window, in expressionless silence, then said:

"Do you know what I'm thinking of? That recon squad going off in the jungle. They were impressive, weren't they?"

Local Sales, Income Tax

The Legislature had very good reason for giving its smashing approval last week to a bill clearing the way for tax exemption of any or all personal property, from motor vehicles to business inventories to machinery.

* * *

It also has very good reason, at the same time, for seeing that the loss of revenue to local governments, as a result of these tax exemptions, can be made up from other sources. So far, the senators have not been so diligent on this point.

* * *

Passage of the bill, LB166, is one more giant step in the shift away from excessive tax burdens on property. Certainly this is a long-overdue reform in Nebraska's tax structure.

The measure calls for a constitutional amendment which will require a favorable vote of the people in November of 1968. Any tax exemption provision is quite sure to be accepted by voters. If so, the 1969 Legislature would have authority to classify all personal property, exempt any or all of it from property taxes and establish different tax rates on different classes.

In addition, the Legislature has given first round approval to another constitutional amendment, in LB226, to exempt from taxation $2,000 of actual value of all owner-occupied homes. This also has justification.

As backers of LB166 expressed it, the Legislature should have a flexible hand in adjusting tax situations to meet changing economic conditions. This is entirely true. It is the crux of the whole argument for revising the tax base of the state.

* * *

But the same thing is just as true for local governments — municipalities, counties, school districts. They, too, need a flexible hand in adjusting their tax situations, particularly in view of the far-reaching changes being initiated by the Legislature in the traditional tax patterns.

* * *

The glaring gap in the Legislature's generally brilliant tax action thus far is a lack of appreciation for the coming revenue plight of the local governments.

Indeed, at the same time the Legislature was repealing several existing taxes available to local governments and setting the stage for the repeal of more, its Revenue Committee was killing a bill permitting cities and counties to levy their own sales tax. This seems highly inconsistent.

Since the state already is barred from the use of property taxes, the effect of any limitation in property taxation now will be entirely at the local level. And any restriction of this revenue source must be accompanied by an expansion of alternate sources or else the local governments will be in an impossible bind.

The Legislature has promised to replace from state sales and income tax funds the money they will lose from taxes already repealed — the head tax and property taxes on household goods and intangibles. This promise is embodied in LB554, still awaiting final passage.

The loss of these funds to school districts, plus any further losses, can be compensated by enactment of the pending state-aid-to-schools bill. Under the circumstances, it is imperative that the school aid bill be passed.

* * *

Beyond these rebates from the state, however, it is swiftly becoming more obvious that the cities or counties or both will have to be provided their own alternate sources of revenue. Otherwise, the tax rate on remaining taxable property, essentially real estate, will be forced to still higher levels.

* * *

The defeated city-county sales tax, LB768, would have permitted these local governments to impose an additional one percent tax on sales made within their limits. This would be collected by the state along with the state sales tax.

The same concept could easily be extended to the income tax, with cities or counties adding their own percentage of this tax, from income derived within their limits, to that collected by the state.

* * *

As it remodels the state tax structure, the Legislature has a compelling responsibility to give equal consideration to the revenue problems of the local governments through the use of the sales and-or income tax at the local level. It can start this process by reviving LB768.

A WORLD OF HUMOR

By ART BUCHWALD

Yes, We've No More Bananas

It's very hard to be a parent of a teenager these days. You have to keep on your toes all the time. Just the other morning I walked into the kitchen and I caught my son taking a banana out of the fruit bowl.

Buchwald

"What are you doing with that banana?" I shouted.

"I'm going to cut it up and put it on my cereal," he replied.

"A likely story," I said. "You weren't going to smoke it, were you"

"Smoke the cereal?"

"No, smoke the banana, smart aleck. I read all about you kids going around smoking bananas behind your parents' backs for kicks."

He became very interested. "How do you smoke a banana" he wanted to know.

"You don't smoke the banana. You smoke the skin."

He looked at me in amazement. "What have you been smoking?"

* * *

"Now don't try to be smart with me," I said. "You know very well what I'm talking about. You take the skin and scrape it out and then make a paste out of it and then you bake it and then you smoke it."

* * *

"What for?"

"So you'll have hallucinations."

"I'll eat the fruit and you can keep the skin if it bugs you that much. Look, all I want to do is have breakfast."

Just then my wife walked in to find out what the commotion was all about.

"I caught him eating a banana," I said.

* * *

"Well, what's wrong with that:" she demanded.

"Don't you read the newspaper? Kids all over the country are smoking bananas so they can take trips."

"Take trips where?"

"Wherever bananas will take them."

"Well, if you feel that strongly about it," she said, "I won't buy any bananas again."

"Sure, and then they'll sneak up to the fruit store and buy them behind our backs. At least this way we know they're getting good quality bananas."

"Why don't we let him smoke a banana in front of us to get it out of his system?" my wife suggested.

* * *

"That's a good idea. We'll all smoke bananas together and that way we'll know what the kids are experiencing. You're lucky you have modern parents."

* * *

I started scraping out the skins and making a paste. Then I baked it and then I chopped it up and passed out three pipes.

"The three of us sat around the floor of the living room and started to puff.

In about 10 minutes I asked my son what he saw.

"I see Mom getting green."

"That's no hallucination," my wife said.

"You don't look so good yourself," my son added.

Five minutes later we all retired to our respective washrooms. This was the "trip" that everyone was talking about.

Latin Challenge Tremendous One

Not since the inauguration of the Alliance of Progress some six years ago has there seemed to be so much concern with South America. The recent meeting in Uruguay, of American nation presidents has triggered at least new hope, if not confidence, that something good might be ahead.

* * *

Central to this hope is the 19-nation pledge for formation of a South American common market, to be achieved within the next five years. It is believed that this effort may not follow the path to oblivion that has marked so many other dreams in the past.

* * *

The threat of communism that was once the major concern in South America has seemed to dwindle in the past half decade, partly as a result of dismal failure on the part of Cuba's Castro and partly as a result of growing Latin stability.

In general, South America has not made much progress, the average rate of economic growth falling behind the rapid 3% expansion of the population. Needed land reforms have not been forthcoming nearly to the extent needed and widespread poverty remains a critical matter.

Many of the cities of South America are plagued with a growing influx of people from the countryside, negating much of the effort to uplift life in the metropolitan centers. In foreign trade, South America has made little real progress.

But important changes have taken place. Not a country in South America is without some form of progress to which it can point. On the whole, the area has at least not lost any more ground from an economic point of view.

While the two largest nations, Brazil and Argentina, are dominated by powerful military governments, the area can point at this time to an era of governmental stability unique in its history. There are examples of industrial growth, educational opportunity and communications and transportation improvements which set an encouraging pattern for the future.

* * *

The people of Latin America themselves appear to be a little less insistent upon the kind of nationalism that in the past has hampered progress. A concept of unity has softened the attitude of individualism that existed for so long.

* * *

All of these encouraging things feed upon one another, giving more and more impetus to future improvement. The challenge in South America remains, of course, a staggering one but time now seems to favor an ultimate solution.

Being the huge land mass it is and containing a population rapidly increasing from its current 250 million people, it is an area that hardly warrants our indifference. If a truly free society can be established in South America, and such will demand our assistance, the sacrifices involved will be well worth making.

Kuwait: Wealthiest of the World

Provocative EDITORIAL — Topic in News FEATURE

By Roy Essoyan, AP

THE roar of bulldozers is drowning out the Muezzin's call to prayer in this richest little country in the world.

Gleaming office and government buildings and rakish pink, yellow and purple villas are rising out of the oil-rich desert.

And the old Kuwait—a shabby, mud-hut village that subsisted for two centuries on fishing, pearling and smuggling—is fast disappearing. A spanking new country is being built up from scratch on this sandy spit of land at the head of the Persian Gulf.

It's a phenomenon the like of which the world has rarely seen. But then Kuwait itself is pretty phenomenal. It has more millionaires per capita and per square mile than any other country in the world —one out of every 500 residents, or a millionaire every six square miles.

Its 470,000 residents enjoy the highest per capita income in the world—$3,150 compared to $2,746 in the United States. And they import more per capita ($800 annually) than any other country.

They have more doctors, teachers, hospital beds and air-conditioners per person than anybody else. The air-conditioners average out to 2.3 per person not including automobiles, one out of three of which is air-conditioned.

Their government runs probably the biggest per capita foreign aid program in the world. It has dispensed some $650 million to less fortunate Arab neighbors in the last five years.

Kuwait also has the world's biggest water distillation plant—it needs it—and it's building the world's most modern refinery.

The main reason for all these claims to fame is oil. Kuwait produced 2.5 million barrels of oil a day last year, earning $750 million in oil revenues. It ranks fifth in world oil production and, on a per capita basis, is easily the world's biggest oil producer.

Kuwait City . . . from mud huts to millionaires in 10 years.

Kuwait also has no immediate worries of running dry. It sits on the world's biggest single oil pool, the Burgan Field, which accounts for one-fifth of the world's known oil resources. It's 75.2 billion barrels of proven oil reserves will last just about 100 years at the present rate of production.

Kuwait has at least two other outstanding characteristics. It's one of the hottest places on earth, with summer temperatures ranging from 120 degrees in the shade to 175 degrees in the sun.

And it probably has more traffic accidents per person than any other country. One out of every eight cars careening along its broad divided boulevards was involved in an accident last year, killing 123 persons and injuring 1,622.

That was part of the price of pell-mell progress, from camels to high-powered automobiles in 10 easy years.

And life has really been easy for most Kuwaitis since they struck oil. The government has been handing out money nearly as fast as it's been collecting it.

Education is free. Faculties are large, with one teacher for every 13 high school students. Kuwait's first university opened last November with 400 students. And Kuwait's $20 million technical school opened with nine students and still has more teachers and staff than students.

Students admitted to universities abroad are provided with transport, tuition, clothes living expenses and bonuses for good grades. Medical facilities also are free, including hospitalization, doctor's fees, medicine and surgery. Even transients benefit from this.

There is no income tax in Kuwait and any Kuwaiti who want to can get a job in government.

Forests of television antennas sprout out of the roofs — and air-conditioners out of the walls — of mud-brick dwellings. Power lines provide juice for some of the Bedouin tents out in the desert. And big flashy American cars are parked outside the humblest homes.

Kuwait has no natural surface water but its giant distillation plant pours out 10 million gallons a day, and 2,500 tanker trucks work around the clock delivering it to homes. Cut rate water and power costs the government $140 per family.

The government also provides free telephone and television service and it is currently importing trees, at $150 apiece, to line the city's boulevards.

There's still money left over, however, and the government has devised a dandy land purchase program to help spend it. To spread the wealth and stimulate the economy, the government buys land at highly inflated prices and sells it at a loss.

In the next three years it will lay out $600 million for land, for outright sale or for the construction of low-rent units which will be leased to families at $3 to $8 a month, including air-conditioning.

Everybody, however, is not overflowing with happiness in this happiest of welfare states. Some landowners complain the government doesn't wnat their land, or wants to pay them less than it has paid others.

Prohibition, enforced two years ago, brought soaring sales of shaving lotion, kerosene and other alcohol substitutes. Some 200 people died and another 200 were blinded drinking them, until smugglers filled the breach. Whisky is now available at $20 a bottle.

Thousands of drinkers still race over to Basra in Iraq, 75 miles away—or fly to Beirut — every weekend to drink their fill in the fleshpots there.

And passengers on incoming flights to Kuwait—including Arabs in flowing robes — belt down double whiskys as fast as the stewardesses can change their glasses.

Negro Sheriff: No Problems

By Randolph Pendleton, UPI

Sheriff Lucius Amerson leaned back in his chair and observed that all he wants, when his four years as the law in Macon County Alabama, are over, is for people to say "it was a pretty good job."

That may take some doing, for Lucius Amerson is a Negro. No other Negro in Alabama since Reconstruction days has been elected sheriff.

* * *

Amerson is blunt to the point of churlishness with newsmen, but townspeople who will talk say he's doing a good job. They find him cordial and efficient, but he says he's thinking of charging reporters for interviews since they're getting in his way so much.

* * *

"If I don't start making some money," Amerson said, "I'm going to end up poorer than I came in."

The sheriff of Macon County is 33 years old. He's massive. He has three and a half years of college, a wife and two children who live in a jailside annex with him, and a set of weights that he "fools around" with to keep in shape.

He is having a hard time financially because he is on the fee system, with no salary, and his fees have been curtailed. The sheriff normally serves summons and other legal papers, and gets paid for doing it.

* * *

But in one of the rare cases in memory, as soon as Amerson took office this year two constables were appointed. They take care of most of the money-making legwork. They are white.

* * *

"Most of these people in the white community know if they break the law a Negro sheriff will arrest them the same as a white sheriff would," Amerson said.

Sheriff Amerson checks abandoned auto.

Amerson insists against all appearances that being a Negro does not make his job any different from that of other Alabama sheriffs.

But he has found that the white community doesn't care to rely too much on him. He said he has had a few whites in the jail and there have been no problems.

Amerson has a white chief deputy and two Negro deputies. He must work long hours seven days a week to police the county of 27,000 population.

He believes there is a need for other Negro sheriffs and deputies in the state. He points to the fact that there are counties which are 80% Negro and yet have no Negro law enforcement officers.

* * *

Amerson said he does not know whether he will run again when his term is up in four years.

"At the present time I'm just trying to do a job for four years here and live up to expectations, where people can say 'It was a pretty good job.'"

Nebraska's Fourth Estate

" 'For better or for worse, until death do us part,' or until we have another referendum."

"We'll learn to live with it—just as one does with diabetes or emphysema and other unpleasant things."

It was the adoption of a state sales-income tax that prompted such statements from Nebraska's Fourth Estate. Opinion coming from the editorial pages was mixed, including irritation, frustration, confusion, fear and possibly regret at the favoring of the proposal.

Most apparent displeasure with the bill came from the Holdrege Citizen which described Nebraska as now becoming "not the white spot of the nation, but the black spot, from a tax standpoint."

The Citizen proclaimed "Someone should without delay start a movement for a referendum on the new tax program . . ."

Attacking the Citizen's statement was the Lexington Clipper with the question ". . . how in the name of common sense are we going to operate our state on referendums? . . . Why not give the program a trial, it may need a shot in the arm here and there, but we see no reason for a referendum."

The Grand Island Independent was apparently in the same corner by suggesting that if a referendum drive is initiated, "Don't sign the petitions."

The Aurora News-Register believes taxpayers will be paying a great deal more than ever before possibly 50% more "though state senators assure us that spending will be held to a minimum, experience in other states disproves this statement."

The Nebraska Signal (Geneva) also writes, "We probably will find we're spending more . . . but that depends upon how fast we expect to move ahead as a state."

The Pierce County Leader alleges: "If the Legislature provides a share of the sales and income tax to local governments it will be state aid . . . and with state aid will come state regulations. This may be the entire thought behind the Legislature's action in repealing the three taxes (head tax, and taxes on household goods and intangible property) . . . taxes that formerly helped support the state and on the local level helped support the county, schools and cities."

In conclusion the Norfolk Daily News had this to say about the removal of the statue of William Jennings Bryan from the north entrance to the State Capitol and a possible replacement for the pedestal:

"Perhaps a bronze casting of an ordinary man displaying two empty pockets and facing the Capitol rather than looking away? Or a marble bureaucrat facing north with both hands outstretched, palms up?"

Poetry Credit

Lincoln — I believe that it is well within the realm of fairness that Terrence R. Connelly should have received recognition for his poem, "Spring's the Thing," that appeared on Page 1B of the Sunday Journal and Star, April 16.

MRS. M. L. CONNELLY
His Mom

Terry Connelly certainly should have been given credit for his fine poem, which is receiving widespread distribution.

This newspaper discovered the poem in Consumers Public Power District's publication, "Spotlighting Nebraska." Terry's name was not attached to the poem as it appeared in that publication, which accounts for the oversight.

He was given credit, however in a separate statement by Consumers General Manager D. W. Hill, accompanying the poem in the publication, in which Hill identified Terry Connelly as "a bright, young Lincoln native now doing advanced collegiate work." Hill reported that the poem also has been published by the National Poetry Press in an anthology "representing the best work of young poets of America published by the National Poetry Press during the past five years."

Apologies to Terrence Connelly, and thanks to Mrs. Connelly for calling this omission to our attention.—Editor.

Red Schism Closing

At the meeting of the foreign ministers of the SEATO countries, Paul Hasluck of Australia saluted the United States for having accepted "the responsibilities of power" in Asia. Inevitably, he found himself alluding to the nonacceptance of military responsibility in Asia by the other leading military powers of SEATO, Britain, France, Pakistan.

Lippmann

Hasluck became involved in talking of the West European countries as a whole, not one of whom has a single combat soldier in Vietnam. He said that their "lack of interest in Asia today is isolation in its most feckless form."

All this may turn out to have been a rather feckless contribution to the efficiency and effectiveness of the SEATO Alliance, for it certainly will not produce one more combat soldier in South Vietnam.

The real question at issue is whether in accepting the responsibilities of power President Johnson is exercising that power wisely. The crocial issues between the President and his serious critics is whether the right way to exercise the responsibilities of our power in Asia is to engage ourselves in a war of attrition, a "bleeding" strategy in which we exchange in some ratio American lives for Asian lives.

* * *

In point of fact there are very few informed Americans who think that Johnson made the right decision. There are very few who do not at least privately regret that he involved this country as he has. And there are few Americans today, be they doves who want to negotiate our way out or hawks who think we can bomb and fight ourselves out, who do not feel that the real problem is how to extricate this country honorably and decently from the consequences of President Johnson's mistake.

* * *

The argument here and in Western Europe is not about whether the United States has responsibilities in Asia. The idea that the critics of the Johnson policy want to retreat from the Pacific is a straw man put up to hide the real subject of discusion.

* * *

U.S. Responsibilities

It is indisputable that the United States is a great power in the Pacific and that it has responsibilities which it will not evade, among them the security of countries like Australia and New Zealand and the Philippines which lie within the effective reach of our power in the Pacific.

* * *

Hasluck should understand that if the defense of Australia really depends on a land war in Indochina the prospects for his country are grim indeed. For while Johnson may possibly be able to win something like a victory over Hanoi, it is in the highest degree unrealistic to think that we shall exercise our responsibilities by standing guard permanently in Vietnam.

* * *

The truth of the matter is that Australia, which is a continental island, must depend for its security on its own policy and power, reinforced by the sea and air power of the United States.

In the rather meager reporting of the SEATO meeting there was no indication that anyone paid any serious attention to the most important development in the recent history of the war. This is the arrangement reached by negotiation within the Communist world by which Hanoi can be supplied across Chinese territory by the Soviet Union and the East European countries.

* * *

Red Schism

If this arrangement holds, it will destroy one of the basic assumptions of our military and political policy. That policy relies upon the disorders in China and the quarrel between Peking and Moscow to prevent the Communist world from uniting behind Hanoi against the United States.

Opinion Analysis Of Author

If the arrangement holds, it will be impossible to cut Hanoi's lines of supplies and her effective access to the materials and manpower of the Communist world which stretch from the Elbe River in Germany to the frontiers of North Vietnam.

The President has been warned repeatedly by responsible American critics that he was forcing China and the Soviet Union closer together. The underlying condition which has given him a free hand thus far as been the schism in the Communist world. It is being closed by our increasingly aggressive strategy against Communist territory.

* * *

The President has now come to this predicament, and the recent worsening of the war news from Saigon reflects the fact that there has been a sharp worsening of the balance of power in Southeast Asia.

* * *

The balance of power will not easily be tilted back in favor by more bombing, more land fighting, more propaganda. What alone will show us a way out of the predicament is a revision of the strategic objectives to which Gen. William Westmoreland has so unwisely been commited.

Adenauer Death Won't Change Nation

Chicago Daily News Special

Bonn — Amid the general sorrow at the death of Dr. Konrad Adenauer there has been considerable and thoughtful stock-taking about the changes this may produce in modern Germany.

The consensus is that there will not be many that can be traced directly to the disappearance from the political scene of the 91-year-old former chancellor.

Konrad Adenauer

The so-called "Adenauer style" of governing had worried some observers here and elsewhere by its autocratic content and its occasional disregard of constitutional niceties.

Yet even while he lived, the "Adenauer style" underwent two revisions—under Prof. Ludwig Erhard, who governed hardly at all, and more recently under Kurt Georg Kiesinger, who must contend with coalition partners almost his equal in strength.

It is Adenauer's great contribution that the machinery he built around the constitutional skeleton has proved to be sufficiently flexible to permit these changes without major convulsions.

'New Nationalism'

The dangers of a "new nationalism" also have alarmed some observers. Adenauer himself was keenly aware of this and the core of his policy was to make Germany so "European" that a really virulent nationalism could never again gain a foothold.

The radical right fringe in Germany feeds on the stagnation imposed on European cooperation by President Charles de Gaulle of France and on the vague uncertainties about the U.S. commitment to Europe and to the Atlantic alliance.

The nationalist surge, in fact, seems to be subsiding as the extremist leaders quarrel in public and the Kiesinger coalition gains in credibility.

In practical terms, Adenauer's absence may be felt more keenly in party affairs than in government. The Christian Democratic union and its sister Bavarian party, the Christian Socialists, are unique creations in German political history and include the most diverse and conflicting interests.

It was Adenauer's great personal authority more than any other element in the past that held this party together and permitted West Germany to move in the direction of a stable, two-party system, more akin to those of the United States and Britain than to the quixotic continental models.

Considerable statesmanship on the part of Adenauer's successors will be needed to preserve this cohesion.

Cannot Be Replaced

Emotional and sentimentally the frail old man with the face of parchment and the nerves of steel will be missed enormously. Whether they liked him or not, he was an integral part of a profound, intensely personal experience for every German who lived through the chaos and the reconstruction and the birth of new hope in the postwar years. He will not be forgotten and cannot be replaced.

Serious Discussion Not Seen Among Leaders

Chicago Daily News Special

Bonn — Some improvement in the political climate, but not much serious discussion, is expected here during the visit of President Johnson and other free world leaders for the funeral of Dr. Konrad Adenauer Tuesday.

The main problem clouding Bonn's relationships with the United States at the moment is the non-proliferation treaty and all its implications, which the Germans feel the Americans have not yet understood or appreciated.

Many and sentimental words already have been written also about the 91-year-old leader's "last service" to the cause of world understanding in bringing together President Johnson and President Charles de Gaulle of France.

At the most it will be a fleeting contact. It is now expected that Johnson will arrive on Monday and leave Tuesday night. De Gaulle will arrive Tuesday morning for ceremonies that begin at 10 a.m. and run almost continuously until about 4:30. After that he flies back to Paris.

Between the parliamentary ceremonial here Tuesday morning and the religious services in the Cologne Cathedral in the afternoon, the chiefs of state and government and some 1,000 other foreign guests must be transported from Bonn to Cologne.

Arrangements are being made to give them some nourishment at a brief reception before they go to the cathedral at 2. The opportunities for anything more than social formalities are small.

Protocol and security problems are added complications. By virtue of his longer tenure as chief of state, De Gaulle will outrank Johnson, which may not make the contacts easier.

Ohio Rift Worries GOP

Ideological Lines Drawn

By Robert H. Feldkamp
Chidago Daily News Special

Washington — Top-level differences within the Ohio Republican Party, normally a model of unity, are worrying national leaders.

They fear that the Ohio squabble, similar to the ideological battles that so badly split the GOP in 1964, is about to explode and spill over into other key states.

Sources say this could be disastrous to Republicans as they lay the ground work for the 1968 national elections.

The two top Ohio figures who are pulling in opposite directions on important internal matters are State Chairman John S. Andrews of Toledo and National Committeewoman Katherine Kennedy Brown, the Dayton conservative who also heads the Ohio Federation of Republican Women. The federation is an arm of state headquarters.

Two Elections

At issue are two closely watched elections within the party — for the chairmanship of the national Young Republican organization and for the presidency of the National Federation of Republican Women.

Andrews and Mrs. Brown are backing different persons in each contest.

The Ohio GOP generally is pointed to as the prototype of what a state organization should be. Forged by Ray C. Bliss of Akron, now the national chairman, and run by Andrews, a Bliss protege, it is long on power and cohesion.

The battle for control of the Young Republicans is between Jack McDonald of Nashville, Tenn., a militant conservative, and James E. Betts of Rocky River, O., a moderate Andrews man who had formerly headed the Ohio Young Republicans.

Where relations may be reaching the breaking point comes in the jockeying for the top post in the 500,000-member Federation of Republican Women.

The choice of the nominating committee is a "moderate" Californian, Mrs. Gladys O'Donnell of Long Beach.

Her opponent is Mrs. Phyllis Schlafly of Alton, Ill., a 1964 Goldwater stalwart whose book, "A Choice, Not an Echo," generally is credited with helping Goldwater win the nomination. The book also was highly critical of the so-called "eastern establishment" in the Republican Party.

As first vice president of the federation, Mrs. Schlafly was scheduled to become president this year. The federation elects in Washington May 5-6.

Ill Feeling

But she was bypassed by supporters of Mrs. O'Donnell at the urging of—and with help from—some GOP national and state leaders.

Andrews is solidly for Mrs. O'Donnell, as is Bliss. But Mrs. Brown is working hard for Mrs. Schlafly.

Conservatives are generally lining up behind McDonald and Mrs. Schlafly, while the "moderate to liberal" faction is supporting Betts and Mrs. O'Donnell.

And already there is a fear within high party councils that what is happening in Ohio will surely leave scars, both within the state organization and elsewhere.

Udall Being Credited With Interior Dept. Resurgence

By Don Oberdorfer
Chicago Daily News Special

Washington — At the end of his first year in office, Stewart L. Udall was rated by Time magazine as the least effective member of the Kennedy cabinet.

Udall

Now — five years later — he may rank as one of the most successful of the Johnson cabinet.

He has not only survived under two presidents—he has triumphed in his field of greatest interest. During his tenure as Secretary of the Interior, millions of Americans have awakened with shock and anger to their disfigured land, overcrowded parks, poisoned air and water. Moreover, they are eager to act.

Udall did not create this strong new wave of enthusiasm for clean up and conservation, but he has fostered it and channelled it.

His most essential task has been to build national and Congressional support for his ideas.

"Maybe I deserved to be last." Udall says of that early low rating of his performance. He had been a lawyer, a congressman and an amateur mountain climber, but until his elevation to the Cabinet by John F. Kennedy, he had never been an administrator.

Big Difference

At the height of the talk about "Foot-in-the-Mouth" Udall, he decided to write a book. As Udall looks back on it, that made a major difference.

Early in the morning and late at night, and whenever he could find the time between, he laboriously set down in longhand his convictions about the tasks ahead.

The result was "The Quiet Crisis," published in 1963.

Surer Grip

The success of the book seemed to give Udall a surer grip on his job. The climb up the mountainside has been easier ever since.

Some road marks along Udall's trail:

In six years, congress has added 1,223,284 acres to the national park system at Udall's urging, including 300 miles of oceanfront and 47 miles of frontage on the great lakes. In the 15 years previous, no new national parks and few recreation areas were created in the continental United States.

The new national policy is to "put the parks where the people are."

Udall conceived, and Congress approved, the Land and Water Conservation Fund, a continuing allocation of more than $100,000,000 yearly to help localities, states and the federal government develop more outdoor recreation facilities.

Congress created, and placed in the Interior Department, the new Federal Water Pollution Control Administration. Within five years, this job of reclaiming water is expected to cost twice the budget of Interior's largest traditional task, land reclamation in the West.

Under Udall, the Interior Department has doubled its annual budget (to $1.8 billion for the coming year) and added 16,000 employes (to 66,000).

There have been no major scandals under his administration—though the Department's regulation of public lands and petroleum resources have been historic targets for swindlers.

The bitter quarrel between private and public power interests has been held in check by a series of careful compromises.

Finally, Interior is no longer a "Department of the West," with little business or reputation east of the Rockies. It has been transformed into a truly national department by the new recreation and anti-pollution activities, which reach into every state.

For the moment, at least, interest seems to have outstripped the action.

Setbacks

Water pollution, for example, suffered deep setbacks in the new Vietnam-dominated budget. Original authorizations calling for $450,000,000 for waste treatment construction grants to cities and states were pruned back to an estimated spending level of $152,000,000.

Udall leads a far-flung and complex department. Among his other troubles:

The old problem of the American Indian is little closer to solution, despite rising expenditures and manpower devoted to it.

Udall's pet reclamation project, designed to bring new water to his parched home state of Arizona and to fast-growing Southern California, is still stalled in Congress.

Springs Provide Berth Control

South Portland, Me. (UPI)—The largest steel springs ever manufactured have been installed in an improved "berth control" system here.

Twenty-two of the huge coil springs, some almost five feet high and weighing 2,333 pounds each, are installed along the length of a concrete pier, serving as shock absorbers for l ge ships that berth at the pier.

The springs, made by Alco Products, Inc., a Worthington Corporation subsidiary, are all of triple-coil design, with two smaller coils nestled within the large outer coil. The outer coils were made from alloy steel bars measuring three and three-quarter inches in diameter, compared to an inch and a half for railroad freight car springs.

The massive springs absorb the tremendous forces gene.ated when large ships bump or rub against the pier while docking.

Tornado Death Toll Rising

Chicago (AP) — The toll of fatalities from the vicious rash of tornadoes that raked the Midwest rose to 53 Saturday with the discovery of 3 more bodies in shattered buildings and the deaths of 3 of the 274 victims taken to hospitals

The number injured, ranging from minor cuts and bruises to life-threatening conditions, was estimated as high as 1,500.

Unofficial estimates placed property damage in excess of $50 million. A spokesman for the small business administration said it may be several days before an accurate apraisal can be completed

A grim, methodical search through wrecked homes, apartment buildings, stores and garages for missing persons, led to discovery of the additional bodies

The Chicago Weather Bureau said the twisters that hit Friday may go down as the most devastating on record in northeastern Illinois.

Hardest hit was Oak Lawn, a suburb southwest of Chicago where 27 were killed and 3 more died later of their injuries. The twisters which followed a path from western Missouri into Michigan, killed 20 in Belvidere, Ill., a city of 13,000 about 65 miles northwest of Chicago; 1 in Chicago; 1 in Stone Park, a Chicago suburb, and 1 in Hillsdale County, Mich.

They perished in collapsing structures, mangled school buses or were struck by flying debris

Thousands of professionally trained disaster workers and volunteers swung into the mammoth task of hunting for more bodies, locating missing persons, clearing away debris and salvaging furniture, bedding and personal effects from wrecked buildings.

They included National Guardsmen, Army reserve units, Civil Defense workers, Civil Air Patrolmen, policemen, fireman and state clean-up crews equipped with bulldozers and power shovels.

Pleasant View School Hosts Farewell Party

Pleasant View School (Dist 76) south of the Nebraska Penal Complex on Hwy. 77 is surrendering to progress The area will be part of Lincoln, by next fall, through annexation.

Invited to the nostalgic event are the teachers, pupils and officials, past and present, to recall the people and events surrounding the school and visit a school history museum constructed by the pupils.

The last official day of school for the youngsters at Pleasant View will be May 23.

Brussels Booming, But Not Because of NATO

Brussels (UPI) — Whole blocks are going down and new buildings going up all over Brussels, demonstrating the Belgian capital's determination to become Europe's most important center of international life

When the pall of dust from demolitions has disappeared, the Brussels skyline will have completely changed.

It will take years to complete some of the projects, but their scope shows Brussels has faith in its future as "capital" of Europe.

Brussels' claim to international fame dates back to just after World War II when the city fathers made an abortive attempt to make it the United Nations' headquarters before New York was chosen.

The city got its real send-off in 1958 with installation of the European Common Market and Euratom

It will become the real capital of the Common Market when its executives are merged probably this year, with the high authority of the Coal and Steel Community The latter, now established in Luxembourg, will move to Brussels

The city will also house the NATO civil headquarters — moved out of Paris—this fall The Belgians are confident Brussels will then be as much in the focus of international attention as Paris or Geneva

Brussels not only becomes the working home of "Eurocrats" in the present scheme of things, but also of 60-odd embassies accredited to them. These operations in turn have attracted dozens of subsidiary organizations such as employer, worker and social groups and lobbyist organizations. The bigger nations will have three embassies—for Belgium, the Common Market and NATO.

An increasing number of foreign firms have chosen Brussels as their European headquarters The city absorbed them all and is now preparing to do the same with NATO headquarters

Work on NATO's $7 million provisional headquarters started in the suburb of Evere in late March Oct 15 is the scheduled moving day

Housing Interest Slight?

Few Copies Of Bill Used

By LEO SCHERER

Is there much public interest in the proposed minimum standards housing ordinance scheduled for a decision before the City Council May 1?

The answer would be "no," if you consider the number of copies of the proposed ordinance that have been picked up by the public from City Hall.

Around City Hall

The city law department says only about 25 copies of the proposed far-reaching ordinance have been picked up and many copies still are available. They are free.

The ordinance could affect every house in Lincoln and has a list of criteria that would be used as a general standard to judge the overall condition of the dwelling unit.

Liquor Policy

Don't let anyone try to convince you that the City Council's new liquor policy guidelines were developed overnight.

Council members have been working on the new policy for some time and recently met with representatives of the Nebraska Liquor Control Commission to get their views.

The new policy comes as no surprise, since the Council has been getting into trouble with its old policy. Some observers feel it was a mistake. The first error was the failure to try to limit the number of Class C licenses that the city would recommend for approval.

Matters dealing with liquor repeatedly have been before the Council for months and probably will continue to take time and review.

Job Security

Some persons were quite surprised to find out that there can be no large turnover of city employes when a new mayor takes office on May 14.

The reason is that all city employes except the five directors are under the classified service and can't be removed at the whim of a new administrator.

Although both mayoral candidates say they will retain all present city employes, there are some on the sidelines who feel there would be eventual changes or reorganization of departments to fit into the successful candidate's ideas.

Italian Airports To Be Improved

Rome (UPI) — Italy is expected to embark on an extensive airport improvement program in 1967, according to government travel officials.

New runways will be built at Bari, Lampedusa, Salerno, Alghero and Ronchi (Trieste). Air terminals will be improved at Bologna and Naples. And 30 billion lire ($48 million) are earmarked for improvements at Rome's Fiumicino International Airport including expansion of Alitalia's facilities, construction of a third runway and building of an air terminal for domestic lines.

Entrepreneurs Apparently Got Benefit of Valuation Doubt

By HAROLD SIMMONS

Commercial and industrial property owners in Lancaster County apparently received a good share of the "benefit of the doubt" last year when the valuation on such properties was reduced 28%.

Court House Call

Studies then in existence indicated the properties were being assessed at 42.2% of actual value. But now, according to more recent state studies, the property is being assessed at 23.57%.

Considering that the 1966 tax levy was higher than that in 1965 and that property is supposed to be assessed at 35% of actual value, there has been some speculation that the decrease in taxes for 1966 pretty well offset the 1965 increases.

The question now for not only commercial and industrial property but also for unimproved urban lots and single family suburban homes, which are also considerably below the statutory 35% is: What will the county do to equalize assessments?

The ideal solution, which no one involved in tax work seriously disputes, is to have a complete real estate reappraisal and it will be under contract before the end of the year. But it won't be completed for use in taxation before 1970 or 1971.

Short of a complete reappraisal, alternate solutions put forth are to hire additional personnel and reappraise different categories of property, something that would cost money, or to adjust valuations of "blocks" of various properties — something that could produce inequities of assessment between pieces of properties.

These, and possibly other proposals, will be discussed by the county assessor and county board of equalization during the next few weeks.

Durable Cecil

No one can say Cecil Sheets is a quitter.

Buried briefly but apparently unhurt in a cave-in last Monday at an excavation site next to the County-City Building, Sheets came out of the 30-foot-deep hole laughing and joking with fellow workmen who had freed him.

He immediately said he felt fine and was ready to go back to work, which he promptly did after taking a drink of water.

Polish Discount

Washington (UPI)—Poland has doubled its discount for visitors during the off-season, the American Automobile Assn. reports. The former discount was 10%; the new is 20%. Off-season is defined as Oct. 15th through July 31.

It's Not Science Fiction

Unusual Scenes Regular Thing At Science Fair

A live steer (his name is Harold) with a see-through stomach, a do it yourself electro-cardiogram setup, a floating dental chair . . . They may sound like science fiction movie scenes, but they are just as real as Lincoln, Neb.

They are going to be among the features of the Nebraska Centennial Health Fair at Pershing next Saturday through May 6.

The Health Fair, whose sponsors call it "the event of the century," is expected to attract 100,000 visitors.

It's a non-commercial event, supported by statewide and local health groups.

Its aim is to give viewers a glance at the past of medicine, innovations of the present and what to expect in the future.

Another aspect of the fair will be stimulation of interest in medical and health careers. With computers, fair officials hope to show interested students what is expected of those going into medicine from pharmacy to veterinary surgery to general research will be covered in exhibits.

One eye-catcher will be demonstration of surgery on anesthetized dogs in a glassed-in operating room.

The fair will be free to the public. Hours are:

Saturday, noon to 9 p.m.
Next Sunday, noon to 9 p.m.
May 1-4, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.
May 5, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Twice Daily Talks Slated At Auditorium

Some leaders of organized medicine will speak from the Auditorium stage at 4 and 8 p.m. daily during the Health Fair. These include Dr. Charles Hudson of Cleveland, president of the American Medical Assn. (AMA).

Hudson

Each speaker's presentation will be followed by a question - answer period, according to Dr. Fred Nebe, who arranged this health fair feature.

In most instances, Dr. Nebe explained, the 4 p.m. subject matter will be the same as the 8 p.m. talk but slanted toward youth. Dates, speakers and subjects:

Saturday, April 29—Dr. Herbert Raskin of Detroit, general psychiatry and psychoanalysis, "Narcotics and Drug Abuse."

Sunday, April 30 — The Rev. Dr. (MD) William Beachley, chaplain at St. Luke's Hospital in Kansas City, Mo., "Religion, Science and Medicine."

Monday, May 1 — Dr. Harold A. Fenner Hobbs, N.M., orthopedic surgeon and chairman of AMA committee on medical aspects of automotive safety, "Accident Statistics, including the Motorcycle."

Tuesday, May 2—H. Doyl Taylor, Chicago attorney, and director of AMA's department of investigation, "Health Quackery."

Wednesday, May 3 — Dr. Hudson, "Your Future as a Member of the Health Team," 4 p.m., Dr. Allan J. Ryan of Madison, Wis., University of Wisconsin clinical associate professor of surgery and physical education and athletic teams physicians, "What's New in Sports Medicine — or How to Remain an Athlete All Your Life," 8 p.m.

Thursday, May 4 — Dr. Audie W. Davis of Oklahoma City, director aeromedical certification branch, Federal Aviation Administration, "Your Future in Aviation Medicine."

IT ALL DEPENDS ON YOUR VIEWPOINT

If You Hurt, Your Arm Was Twisted; Happy? Thank Tiemann Salesmanship

By DICK HERMAN

There's a small-bore gag in Nebraska Legislature that this would be a propitious year for expanded osteopathic legislation. The reason: Senators will need treatment for recovery from executive arm-twisting.

That unexpectedly heavy (31-18) vote last week for the bill making possible state control of Omaha University brought into the open what had been brooded in private—mutterings about pressure from Gov. Norbert T. Tiemann.

Omaha Sen. Henry F. Pedersen Jr., among losers on the OU bill, publicly accused Tiemann of arm twisting to get the measure passed.

Another View

Another Omahan for the bill, George Syas, gleefully gave full credit to the governor. "We couldn't have done it without him," Syas said.

All this leads to a quick examination of Tiemann's giant-sized role, pushing a legislative program through the 1967 session. He's had many victories and only one reverse to date—defeat of the constitutional convention bill. And that might yet be reversed.

What Tiemann Says

To the Associated Press, Tiemann said he relies on "well-reasoned arguments, common sense and a bit of logic" to sell reluctant lawmakers on voting his way.

"There's no secret or magical tactics," said the first-term Republican. "The legislators for the most part are fair-minded and progressive and respond to a challenge.

"I've never threatened, blackmailed coerced or bribed. If I can't defend my program without resorting to that, I'm either backing bad legislation or taking a wrong position."

Clayton Yeutter, the governor's executive assistant, said Tiemann has primarily used private conferences with senators to push his program as well as share ideas with the lawmakers.

"The governor can be a very persuasive man," Yeutter noted.

Super salesman he might be. None the less a Nebraska governor also has a full chest of instruments to assist him.

Levers For Governor

These can be used entirely by implication and understanding, say senators with the wisdom of experience

The governor has the power of appointment and, some continuing influence over appointees. The governor decides where roads are to be built among the host of competitors for highway improvements. The governor determines who gets new bank charters and who does not. Policy decisions of such important agency heads as the tax commissioner, insurance director and administrative services director are screened through the governor.

State senators have important constituents who deal with state government and want their cases presented to the administrative branch in favorable light. Senators also have particular bills whose fortune might be enhanced by executive support.

Expressions of gubernatorial willingness to help when possible gladden the normal legislative ear and heart.

For one, Omaha's Syas applauds Tiemann's aggressive attitude. "Arm twisting is OK with me," Syas says. The Legislature, in Syas' judgment, had become dominant in Nebraska state government because previous governors stood on the sidelines. "What is happening, I think, is good because it provides balance. It's not good for any one branch of government to become too powerful."

Eric Rasmussen of Fairmont, Committee on Committees chairman and thus in a sensitive internal legislative slot, finds Tiemann's "more positive leadership" a healthy thing.

"If we have a strong governor

Benign Nature Provides Lovely Setting For Arbor Day Romp Through Orchards

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Nebraska City—Old Mr. Morton would have loved every lovely moment of it.

Pink-tinged apple blossoms, the hum of honey bees, the breeze sweetened by the scent of perfect-rowed orchards. And between the trees, sun-splashd youth — skipping, scurrying, shouting, singing youth.

Blueness above, green springiness underfoot, a thousand school recesses capsuled into a single afternoon. Frame such a scene with lilacs and flowering crab, bursting tulips and redbud trees, and you have Otoe County this Arbor Day week.

This year the blooms are several weeks early, but the kids are right on time—and coming from as far as ever. Little "East Bower" of Jefferson County, for example, came 100 miles on the combination quest for knowledge and scamper through the orchards.

"There is much to gain from such a field trip, especially at historic Arbor Lodge," said veteran teacher Irene Shanek of Fairbury, board members helping with her rural brood of 15. "A good deal of education goes along with the fun."

Complementing J. Sterling Morton's museum-like mansion, now a state park, are several other Nebraska City attractions. The old Steamwagon Road, Missouri River waterfront, Pawnee Treaty site and Ft. Kearny blockhouse replica are visited by dozens of schools each spring.

"We opened the Lodge last Saturday and within five minutes there were three busloads of Girl Scouts and Brownies," said Mrs. Ira Glasser, who assists her superintendent husband. "It is common to have four school groups in an afternoon, sometimes more."

Seldom so beautifully timed, this Sunday's Arbor Day program should also catch the peak of the apple bloom. Frosts hitting part of the state left local trees untouched, and it is hoped the wind will be as kind.

"Blossom Sunday" will find the welcome sign out at the three largest orchards particularly. These are the Porter and Kimmel places at the north eodge of town, Catron-Miyoshi just south.

Capitol Tree Planting Set at 9:30 Today

A Ginkgo tree will be planted and dedicated to Nebraska's pioneers at 9:30 a.m. today on the lawn of the governor's mansion to open Centennial Arbor Day activities.

Speaker Elvin Adamson of the Legislature will substitute for Gov. Norbert T. Tiemann at the ceremony. The governor will be out of the state.

After the planting, an automobile caravan, led by the governor's family, will leave for Nebraska City and additional ceremonies at Arbor Lodge

The Nebraska City activities include a noon luncheon open to the public, a parade at 2 p.m. and a program at Arbor Lodge at 3:30

Senators Studying Changes in Sales Tax Law

State senators are having second thoughts about applying Nebraska's new 2½% sales tax to purchases made by state, county and city governments.

The chairman and vice-chairman of the powerful Revenue Committee disclosed they are studying the possibility of exempting all purchases made by the governments in excess of $100.

J. W. Burbach of Crofton is committee chairman and Nebraska City's Rick Budd is vice chairman.

All lawmakers Monday will begin discussion of LB891, the measure introduced last week to make corrections in the sales-income tax enacted April 12. While the May 1-to-June 1 change of starting dates for the sales tax has become the highlight feature of LB891, the measure contains several substantive changes.

Clean Up

Moreover, the "clean up" bill becomes a vehicle for any kind of modification in the basic sales-income tax system senators wish — exemptions, tax rates, etc.

Scottsbluff Sen. Terry Carpenter Saturday said he will ask lawmakers to consider raising the 2½% sales tax rate to 3%, while also junking the scheduled rate drop to 2% on Jan. 1, 1969. Carpenter says he's concerned about the fiscal solvency of the state —a condition he believes is endangered by the 30-day delay in starting the sales tax.

Not until the Dept. of Justice supplied a legal opinion several weeks back, according to Budd, did senators become fully aware the combination sales-income tax bill, LB377, applies the sales tax to governmental unit purchases

A Revenue Committee amendment was drawn exempting purchases made by public and private schools, including institutions of higher education. That took care of the University of Nebraska, the four state colleges and public school districts But not the cities, counties or state government generally.

At his press conference Friday, Gov. Norbert T. Tiemann told newsmen exemption of governmental purchases was something lawmakers might wish to review at some future date

Change-of-Mind

Individuals within the administration are believed to have been aware before Friday a possible legislative change-of-mind was being weighed

A retailer himself, Budd explained there are decided advantages on the side of no exemptions.

For one thing, a business whose merchandise is entirely taxable to any and all customers is simple to audit by taxing officials. Since the retailer pays the 2½% tax on his gross receipts, this becomes the key total. Where merchandise is exempt to some purchasers but taxable to others, more auditing is required, and administrative costs rise.

Likewise, there is a greater compliance burden on retailers, watching sales and keeping expanded records. In states where sales tax systems are shot full of exemptions, businesses often must employ extra personnel simply to handle the sales tax work.

Nebraska will allow retailers 3% of the sales tax they collect as their fee for doing this work.

Food Credit

The rationale of ease in compliance and ease in administration was behind Tiemann's decision to tax food sales, but allow a $6 per person food credit on individual state income tax returns. The Legislature raised that credit to $7 over Burbach's strong objections

Besides the credit another possible procedure relating to exemptions is to refund the sales tax collected from persons or organizations whose purchases legally are exempted from taxation

A check of state officials Friday failed to produce a solid estimate on the amount of money state government spends annually in purchases of tangible property. Best guesses put the sum between $15 and $20 million.

Nebraska Academy Of Sciences Meets Friday at Center

The 77th annual meeting of the Nebraska Academy of Sciences will be held at the University of Nebraska Friday and Saturday.

Sectional meetings dealing with most sciences and mathematics will be held at various times throughout the two days at the Nebraska Center

A speaker Friday night will be Dr. Thad G. Mc Laughlin of Denver a regional hydrologist with the U.S. Geological Survey who will discuss "Nebraska's Ground Water - Problems of Legal Control."

Police Claiming 'Substantial Lead' In Bellevue Killing

Bellevue (?) — Police Chief Warren Robinson said Saturday afternoon officers were "working on a substantial lead" in the fatal shooting of 22-year-old Gene C. Wolfe, part-time attendant at a Bellevue service station

The chief added that he was "not overly optimistic" about an early solution of the murder-robbery but the investigation was "looking very good." Several leads were being checked, he said

Robinson said early hopes that an automatic camera may have recorded pictures of the killer dissolved when it was discovered the device had not been turned on.

The camera was the type used to photograph persons cashing checks.

Two unidentified couples found Wolfe's body when they stopped at the station about 4:40 a.m. Saturday, the chief said.

The body was in a storage room and there was no sign of a struggle. An undetermined amount of money was missing from the cash register.

Wolfe had been shot in the head with a small caliber weapon.

Wolfe, a Bellevue employe of the Omaha Public Power District, was married and the father of a child born April 1. He lived at a trailer court

Wolfe had been with OPPD since Sept. 20, 1965

The manager of the station Donald Campbell of Council Bluffs, said Wolfe had been a part-time employe about six months. He was a 1963 graduate of Abraham Lincoln High School in Council Bluffs.

Several Events Will Coincide With State Centennial Health Fair

By BESS JENKINS

Coinciding with Nebraska's Centennial Health Fair opening here next Saturday are several conventions, conferences and a public open house

Open House

Mental health is responsible for two major events the Nebraska Mental Health Assn. annual conference Friday and Saturday at the Nebraska Center, and Lincoln State Hospital's public open house from 1 to 4 p m next Sunday

Emphasizing the open house is for all of the public, State Institutions Medical Director Dr Robert Osborne says 'Unless citizens see and recognize our problems, they won't realize their participation and that of community resources are needed to help reduce our mental patient population our need for institution beds and our subsequent tax dollar relief"

There are 2,839 patients in the state's three mental hospitals today. 1,059 of them at Lincoln.

All buildings at the Lincoln institution will be open, including the RH or medical-surgical building for which a $2 1 million replacement is being sought in the 1967 Legislature

Mental Health

The Nebraska Mental Health Assn, which attacks this growing health problem primarily through education, will have a national authority, Dr. Robert Pfeiler, of Washington, D.C. as Friday night speaker He is a Lincoln native and University of Nebraska College of Medicine graduate. As project coordinator for the American Psychiatric Assn. he will speak on "Community Health for Community Progress."

Craney

LSR—leadership, service, responsibility — of a mental health association will be emphasized in workshops earlier Friday, following a talk by Marion J. Craney of Topeka, executive director of the Kansas Mental Health Assn.

Doctors Meet

Short one year of being a century old, the Nebraska State Medical Assn opens its 99th annual session May 1 in Omaha.

Traditional holding of sessions between Omaha and Lincoln finds the physicians meeting in Omaha this year while the Centennial Health Fair for which they're a major sponsor, holds forth in Lincoln

American Medical Assn. president Dr Charles Hudson of Cleveland, Ohio, is a May 2 Omaha speaker

This year's annual Distinguished Nebraska Lecture sponsored by the Nebraska Medical Foundation is "The Rise of Twentieth Century Medicine in America," given by Dr. Charles A Doan, dean emeritus of Ohio State University College of Medicine, Columbus. Keeping him company will be more than 20 other U.S. members of the profession on the three-day scientific programs.

Dr. Doan

Dental Session

The 100-year-old Nebraska Dental Assn. membership already convening here this weekend for their Centennial convention and celebration will carry on scientific sessions Monday through Wednesday.

TB Conference

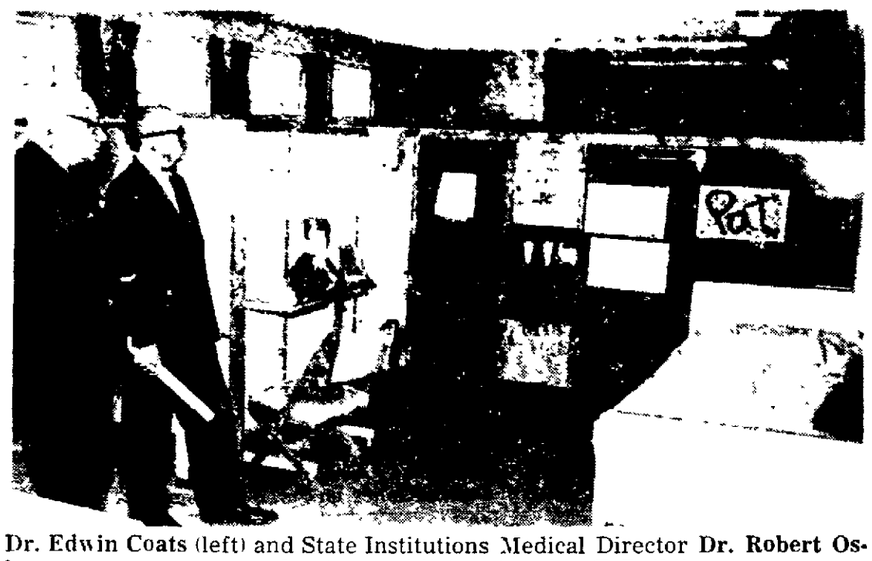
U.S. Public Health Service is sponsor of a week-long conference on tuberculosis nursing starting Monday at the University of Nebraska Medical Center in Omaha.

Other Meetings

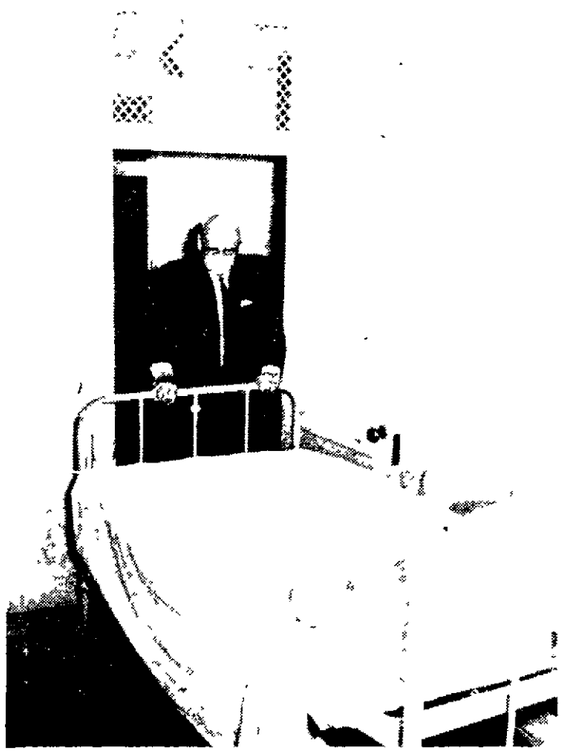
In North Platte, the Nebraska Society of Radiologic Technologists will begin its 36th annual convention May 5.

The Nebraska Welfare Assn, "first cousin" to the growing health family today, will launch its annual three-day convention Wednesday at Midland College in Fremont.

Another former Nebraskan in the national mental health field, Warren Lamson of the National Institute of Mental Health, will help examine Nebraska's services for older citizens, the mentally ill, the mentally retarded, the disabled and the family.



Dr. Edwin Coats (left) and State Institutions Medical Director Dr. Robert Osborne approve space and privacy of living for this T Building teen-age patient resident named "Pat." The T is the hospital's newest structure, less than 10 years old.



Narrow door in postage stamp-sized rooms at Lincoln State Hospital's 1930 building housing medical-surgical patients is pointed up in Dr. Edwin Coats' bed-moving effort.

4 Years Bulwark Governor

Senate Also More Liberal

and the people are unhappy or happy, there is one individual who is responsible," says Rasmussen. Previously, a Legislature constructed of diffuse and shifting non-partisan coalitions took all blame and credit, while "it seemed to be expedient for governors to ride the fence on legislation."

Rasmussen notes, too, that wholly independent of Tiemann, the 1967 Legislature "probably is the most liberal body this state has ever experienced." The governor thus found a Legislature considerably inclined to join him, enacting measures previously rejected

Gerdes' View

This is also the observation of Sen. George Gerdes of Alliance. He says Tiemann is helping push for programs which Gerdes and many other lawmakers have advocated before.

Tiemann said he decided to take a strong hand in legislative activities to make sure there would not be a "leadership vacuum" in the governor's office.

"Obviously, there were all these things that should have been accomplished years ago but which weren't because strong leadership was not provided," he said. "I was perfectly willing to shoulder the responsibility."

Omaha Sen. Edward R. Danner said the Legislature would have enacted a sales tax alone, rather than a combination sales-income tax, had Tiemann not supported the combination plan.

"If he had taken a 'hands off' attitude, we very definitely would have ended up with a straight sales tax," said Danner.

A number of legislators point to the four-year term as the real cause of scene change, both for the Legislature and the governor's office.

The four-year term allows a political bravery which, in the past, often was undermined by the specter of an election try every two years. Tiemann is Nebraska's first four-year governor.

While he has those in disagreement on the point, Rasmussen thinks former Lt. Gov. Philip C. Sorensen would have been as successful as Tiemann on the legislative program front, "if he exerted the same leadership." Sorensen was the Democratic nominee for governor last year.

Contrary Opinion

A Republican lawmaker thinks just the opposite.

"The difference," this solon said — asking anonymity — 'is that three-fourths of the membership is Republican When Budig (former Gov. Frank Morrison's administrative assistant, Gene Budig) used to come around, he got a hostile reaction. But Yeutter has taken charge of this floor. I don't know whether it is good or bad. But it certainly is something new for Nebraska."

On two occasions Friday, Tiemann applauded state senators for their "courage and candor" passing measures including the combination tax, the OU takeover bill, the tax repeal legislation, state aid to junior colleges, a minimum wage law, the new Dept of Economic Development act and the constitutional amendment lowering the voting age to 19.

"There have been more cases of personal courage on the floor," Tiemann said, than he could ever remember.

He credited the two-way street of cooperation between the legislative and executive branches for these impressive achievements

When Job Is Needed, There's Help Waiting

By JACK MERRITT

Not so many years ago, when most men were out of work, and all the mason jars were emptied of last summer's garden, their families' bellies began to growl.

This was before the days of unemployment insurance.

Not so many years ago, when most men lost their jobs, they applied shoe leather to concrete and found another.

But in today's world, job hunters and employers need a middleman to aid them.

In Lincoln the middleman is found at 1410 Q St., the State Office of Employment.

He's Replaced

Charlie Citizen, 33, 1234 Main St., has been packing boxes in a local factory 14 years. Last week his boss told him that a fella named Otto Mation had been hired to pack the boxes.

For the first time in his adult life Charlie was out of work.

Charlie tried pounding the pavement for a couple of weeks, and he read the want ads each evening. But Charlie couldn't find anything he felt he was able to do.

His severance pay was running out, so he took the advice of a neighbor and went to the employment office.

How About Money?

After filling it out Charlie asked, "If I can't get a job today, can I get some of that unemployment money?"

"Let's see if we can get you a job, Mr. Citizen," the receptionist said. "An interviewer will see you about immediate employment and give you a job classification."

"Now, Mr Citizen, where have you worked in the past?' the interviewer asked

"Just one place Been there 14 years, packing boxes," Charlie replied.

"According to the dictionary of occupational titles, your work experience gives you the classification of 'packager, hand.' Do you have any other occupational skills, Mr. Citizen?"

"Nope, I don't think I want to be a packer any more, that Otto Mation fella might show up for my job again"

"What are you interested in, Mr Citizen?"

"I've always had a yen to be one of them guide fellas you read about in the sports magazines. I'm a good fisherman."

'No Openings'

The interviewer checks his index of current job openings and finds nothing for either production work or with the Game Commission or the Forest Service.

"Mr. Citizen, at the present time we don't have any openings for production work or in the out-door field Would you be interested in a service station attendant's job at $1.50 per hour?"

"Nope, I was making $405 a month, and the wife said we have to have about the same. I got two kids, you know."

"I suggest you apply for unemployment benefits, and we'll file your application in our active file."

"You mean, don't call me, I'll call you"

"No, Mr Citizen, your application will be reviewed frequently Mr. Kafka, (Les Kafka, office manager) my boss, insists that we assure people that their interests will be represented even though they are not in the office every day"

After Charlie filled out his application for an unemployment claim, the clerk said:

"Mr. Citizen, be sure to read the part in dark print. It says that you certify that you are 'unemployed, available and able to work . . . and that you are '. . . seeking suitable work.'

"Your payment is based on your previous earnings, and you will receive $40 per week. You'll have to wait for one week while we make a judgment on your claim. Take this payment book, and if you don't get a job come back next week."

"If I can't find a job, can I keep on drawing this money?"

"No, Mr. Citizen. The maximum time a person can draw unemployment benefits is 26 weeks during a benefit year. You might be interested to know that the average in the Lincoln area is 10.8 weeks."

"Our office in 1966 paid a total of $730,437 in compensation in all our programs."

"No kidding. How many jobs did you find for people?"

"In 1966, we had a total of 9,030 new applications. During that year we made a total of 5,932 placements in both the agriculture and non-agriculture fields. Also, we made 18,920 referrals during the year. That figure includes people who already had applications on file.

"Of the 1,618 people hired by Lincoln firms last year, our office placed 25%. This is 5% above the national employment service rate.

"We also referred 262 people for training under the Manpower Development Training Act (MDTA)."

"What's that?"

"Mr. Citizen, why don't you ask to be scheduled to see one of our counselors in our Technical Assistance Dept ?"

Charlie went to the counselor, who gave him a battery of aptitude tests and explored his skills and interests.

He was recommended for training as an IBM programmer and agreed to go to Ottumwa, Iowa, to the MDTA school there for one year. During this time his wife received $36 a week, plus $5 for each child. Charlie received $5 a day subsistence and had his transportation paid to and from the school.

The place where he worked eventually hired him back and now he tells "that Otto Mation fella" what to do.

Zoning Change Studied

Commercial Use At 27th-South

The City - County Planning Commission Wednesday will consider requests for zoning changes to commercial use on three lots on the northwest corner of 27th and South.

The applicants, Alice Etta Roseau, Louis Svoboda and George Epp, ask for a change of zone from B two family dwelling to G local business on the property.

The planning staff and the commission recommended denial on a similar request in November, 1965. Mayor Dean Petersen vetoed City Council approval of the change and the council failed to override the veto.

Planning Director Douglas Brogden has recommended denial of the new applications because "there have been no change of conditions in this general area since the previous action to warrant a change of zone."

The planning commission turned down the original applications citing the belief that approval would have an adverse effect on adjacent residential property and traffic at the intersection and that "there is no public need for additional business uses in this general neighborhood."

Other planning commission business:

—Change of zone from G local business to A-2 single family and from AA rural and public use and G local business to G-1 planned commercial on separate properties at West Van Dorn and Coddington, requested by the planning department.

—Change of zone from A-2 single family to B two family on the west side of 48th, between Pawnee and High, requested by William A. Snyder and others.

—Change of zone from A-2 single family to G local business on the south side of Normal at 46th, requested by Randolph Horsley.

—Proposed amendment to the zoning ordinance permitting air conditioners to extend into the front yard area.

Calf's Lungs Aid State Educator In Crusade Against Lung Cancer

The first time Mrs. Myrtle Day asked American Stores for a cow's lungs, they were so big she had to put them in a washtub.

Since then, she gets calf lungs. They are only about four times the human lung size.

Still another big difference usually exists between calf and human lungs, this teacher-superintendent turned state health education staff member tells her young elementary school audiences.

Calves haven't taken up smoking so their lungs are pale white pinkish tones, unmarred by black blotches or areas seen in those of human smokers.

In her smoking program work for the state, Mrs. Day is promoting the fight against this cause of lung cancer, No. 2 killer of humans, as much as the door-to-door volunteers now engaged in the Lancaster County Chapter's annual crusade.

Michael Dietz, Waverly sixth grader, encouraged by Mrs. Myrtle Day, blows through a calf's air pipe to discover how the animal's healthy pale pink lungs do their job.

Half to Research

Nearly half the local contributions will go to national research for the continuing fight to discover causes and cures. Fifty per cent stays in the chapter for services and 10% to the state organization.

Mrs. Day's educational tools, at Waverly last week for example, were the calf's lungs, a pair of mice from Eppley Institute doomed to die as skin cancer on their backs invades their bodies, films and a line of reasoning not even a smoking parent could challenge.

Don't, she told Waverly fourth, fifth and sixth graders, go home and nag your parents if they smoke.

"How many of you," she asked, "bite your finger nails?" More hands went up than stayed down.

Hard to Stop

"I remember and you know how hard this habit is to break. Well, smoking's like nail biting, maybe worse. Real hard to stop, no matter how much you want to."

What Mrs. Day wants is to instill in her young audience's mind the importance of the job that their lungs must do and how they can help to keep them healthy.

They find out the skin cancer on Carci's and Noma's backs has appeared since Jan. 28. It came after 28 applications of coal tar, the same cigaret substance that smoker's lungs must fight off.

With Mrs. Day's help, children realize that cigaret smoking tar doesn't affect all human lungs the same way and at the same pace. Noma's cancer is far more developed than Carci's to illustrate this point.

Lasting Impression

If Mrs. Day makes a lasting impression on a young audience, her day is complete.

As she speaks to each one, she keeps seeing estimates from the Lancaster County Medical Society and U.S. Public Health that indicate one million children now of school age will die of lung cancer before they reach 70 if rising trends in this form of malignancies continue.

It claimed 2,500 lives in 1930, 18,000 in 1950 and 41,000 in 1962, she tells children as part of this real life story.

Venner Sees Local Industry Opportunities

Meeting the labor demands of existing industry is the most practical approach to industrial expansion in Lincoln, Robert C. Venner said Saturday.

Venner, a candidate for mayor, emphasized he would "intensify, not decrease" programs seeking new industry. "But," he noted, "we have the opportunity to expand considerably within the present industrial community.

If elected, Venner said he would join local industries in "an all-out campaign to sell Lincoln to technically skilled young Nebraskans."

"We need to convince our youth to stay in the state, specifically in Lincoln, and work for industries now located here," he said.

Few All-Day Sessions This Week

Executive-session meetings of standing committees plus a public hearing Friday for four bills will prevent the Legislature from going on an all-day schedule for all of this week.

But those morning and afternoon meetings will at least be started, perhaps by midweek, Speaker Elvin Adamson reported.

On Friday, the Government and Military Affairs Committee has four bills before it in a public airing. The Budget Committee is scheduled to hold executive sessions throughout the week working on the omnibus appropriations bill. This money package is expected around the middle of May.

Two other committees, Education and Public Works, have a number of bills still to act upon, while the Miscellaneous Subjects Committee has several proposals dealing with liquor laws.

Bills now pegged for public hearing Friday before the Government Committee:

LB890—Lowering the voter requirement from 55% to a simple majority for creation of new junior college districts.

LB887—Revising state law related to the creation and expansion of ground water conservation districts.

LB888—Providing that payment of retirement or retainer benefits to veterans shall not disqualify such veterans for employment security benefits.

LB892—Rewriting law on annexation powers of second class cities.

According to spokesmen for a Lincoln hospital, tests conducted on the child indicated that the girl appeared to have been molested.

STATEHOUSE LETTER

It is his present thinking, says Alliance's George Gerdes that he will not seek a fifth legislative term next year. A number of other veteran lawmakers are talking in similar tones. Unquestionably, Gerdes, 68 is and has been one of the shakers and movers on and behind the legislative scene. This session, especially, his name is found on many far-reaching proposals.

Hastings' Dick Marvel last week left open the the possibility he might bow out after 14 years and Sam Klaver could call it quits after 24. Sen. Arnold Ruhnke of Plymouth also will have served 14 years by next election time.

There has been talk Speaker Elvin Adamson is being encouraged to oppose Rep. David Martin of Kearney in the Third Dist. Republican primary. And in the Second Dist. Omaha Sen. Eugene T. Mahoney is considered, by some, a potential successor to Rep. Glenn Cunningham, his former boss.

Reports trickle in Sens. George Fleming of Sidney, Fern Orme of Lincoln, Ross Rasmussen of Hooper and S. H. Brauer St. of Norfolk may have competition in any 1968 re-election bids.

New Plans Ruled Out

Most state agencies put into their 1967-69 budget requests allotments for state-paid group insurance. Approximately two dozen agencies, including the legislative Council, now have such programs.

In his executive budget, Gov. Norbert Tiemann ruled out all new plans leaving stand those already in existence. The Budget Committee was presented with the option of following this recommendation, letting agencies have a free hand within their appropriations, permitting funds so all state workers might be covered or ordering no agency be allowed any group insurance (paid for by the state) after July 1, 1967.

In the Folder

A possible tuition increase at the four state colleges was discussed by Normal Board members in Kearney last week.

Omaha Sen. Edward Danner realizes it will be an uphill struggle to enact his open housing bill. Racial disturbances in Omaha would react to harm, not help the cause, Danner says.

Being considered: Complete redecoration and refurbishing of the governor's office — carpeting, drapes, desk, wall hangings, etc. There haven't been any major alterations in the front office since the Capitol was built.

Game Commission officials seemed to make a special point telling budget Committee members last week how local communities in their individual legislative districts would benefit — IF the Commission wins the appropriation it seeks.

2 Former Nebraskans Speakers at Portland

By LLOYD MacDOWELL

Two former Nebraskans are among the featured speakers at the National School Boards Assn. convention which ends Tuesday in Portland, Ore.

Dr. Wayne O. Reed, assistant U.S. commissioner of education, served Nebraska as state superintendent of schools and later as president of Peru State College.

E. C. Stimbert, superintendent of the Memphis, Tenn. schools, was superintendent of the Nehawka and Lyons schools. He is also a member of the U.S. advisory council on state departments of education.

Levies a Factor?

Several people from Meadow Grove complained to the Legislature's Education Committee recently that their school board had merged their district with Tilden, while most of the citizens wanted to join the Battle Creek district.

Could be that the board was looking at the school mill levies. Battle Creek 71.10 mills, Tilden 37.10 mills.

55% Teachers

A survey of Danforth Foundation fellowship winners shows that as college teachers, they would expect to teach about 55% of the time and spend the other 45% in research and writing.

Most of them planned to teach in private colleges or universities. That's the kind of schools they came from.

THE PENNEY STORY

Why make such a big, big deal out of quality?

By ROBERTA NASH

If you ever want to get a Penney man going, ask him why Penney's makes such a big deal out of quality. Then stand back.

I asked a Penney store manager the question once and when he finally decided I was serious, he said, "If I could use only one word to describe the phenomenon of Penney's, I'd pick the word, quality.

"Mr. Penney has always been a fanatic on the subject," he continued. "They say the only thing that still makes Mr. Penney angry is when someone suggests we compromise Penney quality to make a lower price."

State's Worst Air Crash Came in '66

By DICK BUDIG

Last August a commercial airliner crashed near Falls City killing all 42 persons aboard.

With that mishap, Nebraska entered a new phase of its aviation history.

The Falls City crash of a Braniff BAC111 was the first fatal commercial airline crash in the state and ranks as its worst air disaster.

Until the August tragedy—with the exception of three military plane crashes in the state in 1944 — aircraft accidents in Nebraska were tabulated under a column headed "general aviation."

The state now uses another column headed "civil aviation" in which fatalities resulting from commercial aviation are kept.

General aviation is usually thought of as being made up of private — little airplane — users, such as flying farmers.

There are five categories under that heading, however, some of which account for aircraft considerably larger than Piper Cubs.

The categories are business flying, formal education, commercial flying, personal flying and a miscellaneous category headed "other."

Commercial flying includes air taxi, crop dusting, pipe line patrol, photography and such. Business flying includes planes up to airliner size used by business.

Nebraska's highest accident-rate year, according to records of the Nebraska Dept. of Aeronautics, and its statistics are not complete, occurred in fiscal year 1958-59. State records are kept on a fiscal basis.

In that period there were 90 mishaps, one of which was a fatality accident.

The rate ebbed to 56 accidents in fiscal 1955-56. In that 12-month period, however, 19 persons were killed in 10 of the accidents.

The highest death rate occurred in fiscal 1964-65 when 23 persons died. The Department of Aeronautics said 68 accidents occurred during that time.

Records of the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) district office in Lincoln are kept by calendar year.

In the past five years, Nebraska's highest accident-rate year was in 1961 when 93 mishaps occurred, six of which were fatal, according to the FAA.

With the exception of the 72 mishaps recorded in 1965, FAA records indicate a general decline in the number of accidents per year.

At the same time Mel Wood, supervisor of the Lincoln FAA office, said the number of pilots and aircraft continues to grow each year.

There are 5,337 active general aviation pilots and 1,734 active aircraft in the state, he said.

In the last year the number of active pilots has gone up 6% and active aircraft have gone up 10%. Student pilot licenses have gone up 15% in the last year, he added.

Wood said he is looking for a 10% increase in general aviation activity for the next five years in Nebraska.

Wood attributed the downturn in general aviation accidents to accident prevention programs conducted both by his office and the state office.

"The response is tremendous. Pilots are clamoring for knowledge," Wood said.

Meanwhile, as accidents edge down in Nebraska, statistics for the number killed in general aviation mishaps for the nation continue to creep up.

The National Safety Council reported recently that general aviation accidents accounted for 80%—or 1,069—of the 1,340 civil aviation deaths reported by the Civil Aeronautics Board in 1966.

It was the third straight year in which general aviation deaths topped the 1,000 mark. The 1965 death toll was 1,018 and the 1964 figure was 1,086.

And for Nebraska, 1966 was the first year the state added statistics to the overall total.

Change in Dock Before Council

A resolution granting the Journal-Star Printing Co. permission to reduce the width of its loading dock and canopy in 9th St., between P and Q Sts. is before the City Council Monday.

The company has agreed to perform the construction work to reduce the 25-foot width dock and canopy to seven feet width. The action was requested by the city which plans to widen the paved portion of 9th between P and Q in connection with the 9th and 10th St. improvement project.

The project also requires the relocation of the North Western Railroad spur track on the east side of 9th St. to the east.

The resolution also provides the Journal-Star Printing Co. will pay annually, so long as permission remains in effect, a permit fee as may be determined by the Council; reconstruction subject to city approval; filing of public liability bond; and 10-year use permission and from year to year thereafter subject to revocation by the city under rights granted to it by present law.

The Council in 1951 passed a resolution granting the printing company permission to construct and use a loading dock and canopy in 9th St. between P and Q in connection with the spur track used to deliver newsprint and ink for the last 26 years.

The original track was laid in 1902 by the railroad which paid for it and selected where it should go in the street under a 1902 city ordinance.

Grand Island City Government on Line

By JOHN LEE
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Grand Island — Shake-up or status quo in Grand Island city government is on the line in a special election Tuesday.

Votes will decide whether the Third City shall continue as it is or return to a home-rule city charter plan.

The campaign has been a heated one, arousing much more controversy than it did four years ago when the electorate decided to give up the city charter.

The lines have formed behind the Grand Island Taxpayers Assn., formed for the purpose of putting the issue to a vote, and the Greater Grand Island Good Government Committee, reincarnation of the organization that was successful in obtaining the switch to city manager government in 1963.

Two Sides

The Taxpayers Assn. is seeking eventual return to the mayor-council form of government which the city has had twice previously. The Good Government supporters, on the other hand, wish to retain the city manager system that has twice succeeded the mayor-council.

The Taxpayers petitioned for the election.

"No mayor ever had the power" that City Manager John Carpenter has now, said E. Merle McDermott, a former mayor and legal counsel to the Taxpayers Assn.

Marvin Lautenschlager, chairman of the association, pointed out figures showing that, at the end of six months, only 31% of the city tax funds collected have been spent, and "we feel this is not good management. This has gone beyond a reasonable cushion."

Bill Moore, good government co-chairman with Dr. Robert Leslie, however, contends Carpenter has "operated a good, hard-headed business administration. He has saved many times his salary" by seeking and obtaining federal assistance funds.

"If the city wants to grow," he said, "it has to be run like the $15 million business it is."

McDermott has cited as excessive the $52,000 currently in the annual budget for the legal expenses of the city and also the status of the city attorney.

"The city attorney can be hired and fired at the will of the city manager," he said, "which the council cannot do. He (the attorney) should represent the people as well as the city manager."

Moore has charged that McDermott is contributing to the cost of litigations by representing more than one-third of the 14 suits pending against the city.

The Taxpayers Assn. is also arguing that the city administration has ignored the will of the people in failing to establish the ward system for city elections.

Ward System

Voters favored the ward system when the city manager administration was set up and a state law was passed to allow it in first-class cities.

"It has been at the discretion of the city council for four years and we still don't have the ward system," McDermott said.

The city attorney gave an opinion that the state law did not make provisions for election by wards, the Good Government group cites.

Following a straw vote at the Apr. 4 election, which showed voters favoring wards two to one, Grand Island Sen. Don Elrod has introduced legislation to clarify election procedures.

"We don't need a charter to establish the ward system, Moore noted. But McDermott opines the council "did not want the ward system," and that it should have a court test of the earlier state law.

Levy Hike

The city government and charter issue arose after Grand Island's tax levy was increased five mills last year to the 25-mill maxium under state statutes. The Taxpayers Assn. subsequently formed to petition for the charter election.

The levy boost, according to McDermott, had no reason or justification, and a new city charter could have a lower limit written into it.

Lautenschlager, a former state senator, said the levy increase plus increased evaluation has resulted in 37% more revenue for the city in the current year over the past year.

The figure is an increase of about 67% over 1962-63, the last year under the old city charter, he noted.

A rein on "excessive taxation and uncontrolled spending" is needed, McDermott said, noting "taxes are getting so bad some people have had to move out of town."

Moore said the 25-mill levy was established because the city attorney's opinion held that figure as mandatory under an act of the 1965 State Legislature.

A bill has since been passed that establishes the levy as a permissive maximum, and the city could set a lower rate in the future without the necessity of stating it in a city charer, he noted.

Under a former charter, he cited, an 18-mill maximum was set, but with exceptions for such items as revenue bonds. the city was over the 18-mill limit eight of ten years.

The organization also points to figures showing "Grand Island is getting a smaller percentage of the total tax dollar than it has in years past which shows good administration."

'Wrong Road'

The charter system, Moore stated, "is the wrong road to go." If approved here, Grand Island would be the only first class city among 25 in the state to operate under a charter.

The real estate and public relations man pointed out that, since state laws take precedence, "whenever one first class city gets a bill passed (by the Legislature), it affects the other 24. There are 142 bills in the Legislature this session that affect these municipalities."

"When we had a charter before, we had nothing but confusion, litigation and chaos," he said.

Lautenschlager countered that Lincoln and Omaha operate under charters and Grand Island should, too. "It's easier to amend a charter than to change state laws," he said.

McDermott noted that it wouldn't be necessary to amend the charter to conform with new state laws, but that sections of the charter "would be void if they were in conflict with state law."

'They're Sorry'

Moore, who claims some 20 organizations in the city have endorsed a vote against the charters proposition said, "There's not a single one of these issues that necessitate going back to a city charter."

If the charter is approved, he noted, additional elections would be required, to elect freeholders to draw up a new charter, to approve or reject the charges and, possibly, to change the form of government.

McDermott, who said 25% of the largest voter turnout in recent elections signed the petitions to put the issue on the ballot, stated, "We think the people want home rule to put a limit on what any of the forms of government can do."

The old charter, he admits, "needed revision and updating, but the people didn't realize it then (when it was voted out) and now are sorry for it."

Pinch Hitter Course Liked By Plane Riders

The Nebraska Airplane Owners and Pilots Assn. will hold a flight training clinic here May 4, 5 and 6. Ground courses will be conducted at the Nebraska Center by AOPA instructors from Washington. Most of the flight course instructors are Nebraskans. These courses will be at the Lincoln Municipal Airport.

Of the courses offered, the "pinch-hitter course" is the most popular. More than 2,000 people have completed it. The course is designed to enable people who are normally passengers to take over a plane's controls in emergency situations. It covers radio navigational procedures and communication in addition to basic instruction in flying.

The clinic also offers more technical courses for pilots. The clinic is sponsored by Duncan Beechcraft, Inc., the Lincoln Aviation Institute, Inc., and the AOPA Foundation in cooperation with the Nebraska Dept. of Aeronautics.

Printing Firm Splits Operations

Employes Start Nebraska Litho

The Nebraska Farmer Co. and 30 of its present employes announce that a new company, to be known as the Nebraska Litho Co., is being formed and will begin operation May 1 in a building at the former Lincoln Air Force Base.

Farmer president Roger Dickeson said that after May 1, the Farmer will specialize in web offset printing and Nebraska Litho will take over and specialize in sheetfed lithographic printing. Both types of printing previously had been done by the Farmer.

The new firm, owned and operated by the former employes, will be headed by Lee Hendry, president and general manager.

Officials said the new firm had purchased all the Nebraska Farmer sheetfed presses, bindery equipment and raw material, work-in-process inventories and part of the hot-metal typesetting equipment. All will be moved to the air base building.

The Farmer corporation, the announcement said, will expand its rollfed offset printing in the space vacated by the equipment sold to the new firm.

Fairbury Beef Show Continues to Grow

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Fairbury—Billed as largest show of its kind between Chicago and Denver, the Blue Valley Beef Revue topped itsself again Saturday.

The three-breed program attracted almost 500 hereford, angus, and shorthorn entries, as well as 1,500 or more spectators. Judging participants alone numbered 389.

"Five years ago, we were pleased to have 185 animals, but we're over the hump now and I think we'll keep growing," enthused Alvin Boettcher, show committee chairman.

Citing one owner who came 480 miles, President Marvin Schultis said this is an example of "our really great potential." Overall quality continues to parallel the show's numerical growth, he noted.

A large number of Kansas animals swelled the entry list, and several Sandhills showmen were present. Jerry Hellgren of Grayslake, Ill., was official judge and NU livestock specialist Paul Guyer served as ringman.

The event is sponsored jointly by the Fairbury Chamber of Commerce, state and county Extension Service, FFA, and Jefferson County purebred breeders. Eugene Henkel and Ray Schmidt are other committee officers.

Badger Runners Whip NU

Madison, Wis. (AP) — Two-time NCAA champion Charlie Greene of Nebraska was upset in the 100-yard dash for the first time in his college career Saturday as Wisconsin outran the Cornhuskers and Northern Illinois in a triangular track meet.

Greene, running without bothering to shed his warm-up clothes in the near-freezing temperatures, wound up a nonchalant last in the field of sevens. Northern Illinois junior Joel Cochran was his conqueror with a wind-pushed clocking of :09.5.

"It was too cold to run fast," said Greene.

Wisconsin's NCAA indoor champion at 1,000 yards, sophomore Ray Arrington, took the half-mile in 1:57.3, but was beaten by inches by another sophomore, Hugh McGovern of Nebraska, in the 660-yard run. Both were timed in 1:22.3.

The Badgers piled up 102 points to 64 for Nebraska and 40 for Northern Illinois. Winds gusting up to 30 miles an hour added an icy edge to the 37-degree weather.

Nebraska's Dave Kudron won both hurdles events, and teammate Ray Harvey was second in the highs. Third in that race was Big Ten champ Mike Butler.

I May Be Wrong

By Don Forsythe

College athletic recruiters stayed away in droves when Dennis Dukesherer picked up his diploma at Harvard High School nearly two years ago.

It wasn't that he didn't have some talent. Nine letters in three sports and a state Class C pole vaulting championship with a mark of 12-7 should have been enough to elicit some interest from a few coaches.

But who would want to take a chance on a 5-8, 140-pound youngster?

They're not going to do you much good in football and basketball. And with eight others having vaulted between 12-7 and 14-0 in the 1965 state meet there were plenty of these sky-riders to go around.

Dukesherer

But a funny thing happened to Dennis after he had walked out of old Harvard High and quietly enrolled at Kearney State. He started growing. Now there are 160 sinewy pounds on the 6-1 sophomore's frame.

Misses Were Costly

And he's doing things with those 160 pounds that come as a surprise to even himself. "I really didn't think anything like this would happen," he says of his meteoric rise as a pole vaulter.

There have been a lot of Nebraska collegians catapulting themselves into the wild blue yonder since Cornhusker Don Cooper became the first U.S. collegian to top 15 feet in 1951. But "Duke" has left them all behind and is now bidding for the 16-foot mark.

He hasn't thought much about 16 feet yet, primarily because he had set a goal of "only" 15-6 for the current campaign. That mark fell Tuesday against Fort Hays as he went 15-6¼. The vault is the best among the nation's NAIA schools this season.

It all started back in about the fourth grade. There was no formal training, but a severe penalty for failure.

"I was always trying to vault over things like picket fences . . . and I've got scars on my legs to prove it," he smiles.

Adds Two Feet a Year

But it wasn't until Dennis was introduced to the fiberglass pole that he found himself as a vaulter. He cleared 10-6 as a junior, then switched to glass and went 12-7 as a senior. His rapid progress continued last year as he moved to 14-7¾ and the end isn't in sight yet.

"I have a great vaulting coach," he explains, referring to the veteran Charlie Foster, "and I'm still learning how to use the pole."

It looks like the only thing that can slow his progress will be a love affair. And he's got one steaming at this very moment.

A girl?, Nope, it's the triple jump.

"It's more fun than vaulting . . . I love it, but it does take a lot out of your legs," he says.

But with a triple jump best of 45-8½ and a broad jump effort of 23½ to his credit, Dennis can probably stay in the good graces of coach Foster even if he loses his pole.

Colorado dropped Kansas State two games behind front-running Oklahoma State in the Big Eight baseball race Saturday by stopping the Wildcats, 8-6, in Boulder.

It was the second win in the three-game series for the Buffs. Oklahoma State, tied with K-State before Friday's play, took command of the race with a sweep of its series with Nebraska.

Oklahoma split with Iowa State, winning the opener 6-3 and dropping the nightcap 11-3. The Sooners took over second place by winning two of their three starts against the Cyclones.

In the other action Kansas and Missouri battled to a split.

Missouri bombed the Jayhawks, 10-4, in the opener but Kansas bounced back for a 7-5 win despite making six errors in the second game.

Nick West's 76 paced the Huskers to an 8-7 win over Oklahoma, 9½-5½ triumph over Iowa State and 10½-4½ victory over Missouri to push the NU record to 11-1 for the season.

Nebraska has now defeated both Oklahoma State and Oklahoma, perennially the top teams in the Big Eight.

West's 76 was followed by Charlie Borner, R. B. Lau and Chuck Sweetman, all with 77s. Oklahoma's Steve Johnson and Missouri's Tim Clark were co-medalists with 75.

In Dutch White Relays

Harrison Squeezes To Hurdles Win

TEAM SCORING

Tech 63, Central 57, Westside 52, Lincoln High 33, Burke 30, North 24, Benson 12, Bryan 7, Ryan 6½, Boys Town 6½, Creighton Prep 6, South 2, Rummel 1.

By RICK AKIN

Omaha—At least once a week on the late afternoon "funny" shows, two fat people try to squeeze through a thin doorway. It never works.

Omaha North's George Hicks and Tech's Russ Harrison have the same problem when against one another in the hurdles.

Russ solved it Saturday by whipping past Hicks and former state leader Vince Orduna of Central before the second hurdle to win the 120 highs in the Dutch White Relays on the Tech track.

"The thing with Hicks is that he goes over with his right leg first," the Kansas State-bound Harrison who goes across left first, said. "He swings his arms around and they come in front of me. Then I have to swing mine back and hit him."

All amounts to confusion when they're stride-for-stride. Harrison took care of it quickly.

"We were all about the same at the start," he said. "But I got the lead just before the second hurdle."

The winning time was :14.7, followed by Hicks in :14.9. Orduna, who had the best time of :14.6 before Holdrege's Marv Ayers ran :14.5 Thursday, was third with :15.0.

It was the top individual event of the day. The best mark of the day was recorded by Westside's two-mile relay team.

The Warriors, anchored by Warren Whitted's 1:57.1, toured in 8:11.8, the best so far among Nebraska high schoolers.

Jim Matejka, also of Westside, went 13-3½ in the pole vault for the other mark. That's 5½ inches above his previous best.

The most exciting relay event was the mile, won by Tech in 3:26.5. That's the second best time in the state so far.

Reggie Duncan and Virgil Mitchell ran :49.7 and :49.8 in the last two legs to edge Central, timed in 3:27.5. Westside was third with 3:27.5.

Tech won the team championship with 63 points. Central followed with 57. Westside had 52, and Lincoln High was fourth with 33.

Melvin Tarpley gathered the only Link victory with a 22-1½ long jump. He leads in that event across the state with 22-8.

Harrison was the individual star with victories in the highs and as anchorman of the 440 relay a team, a second in the triple jump and a fourth in the broad jump. He also ran a leg on the 880 relay team which finished second.

Damascus Wins Wood Memorial

New York (AP) — Damascus stuck his nose in front less than one-quarter mile from home, took a strong whiff of Kentucky Derby roses and went on to easily win the $112,400 Wood Memorial at Aqueduct Saturday.

In establishing himself as the horse to beat in the Derby at Churchill Downs May 6, the strong moving son of Sword Dancer from Mrs. Edith W. Bancroft's stable hit the finish line of the 1⅛-mile race six lengths in front.

Alfred Vanderbilt's Gala Performance, not eligible for the Derby, was second with Puerto Rico-owned Dawn Glory another three lengths back for third place in the field of nine 3-year-olds. High Hat, another non-Derby eligible, was fourth.

Toronto Evens Hockey Series

Montreal (AP) — Pete Stemkowski, Mike Walton and Tim Horton scored for Toronto and goalie Johnny Bower shut out Montreal as the Maple Leafs evened the Stanley Cup final playoffs at one game each Saturday by defeating the Canadiens 3-0.

The National Hockey League playoff now moves to Toronto where the teams will play Tuesday night.

O-State Blanks NU, Sweeps Series, 3-0

Stillwater, Okla. (AP) — Richard Frank and Larry Burchart combined for a three-hitter Saturday as Oklahoma State blanked Nebraska, 3-0, to maintain a tight grip on first place in the Big Eight Conference baseball race.

The Cowboys, winning their eighth straight conference game after an opening day loss to Missouri, garnered only five hits off three Nebraska pitchers, but took advantage of five Cornhusker errors to win handily.

Frank pitched five innings of shutout ball for Oklahoma State, allowing only two hits and two walks. However, he walked the Nebraska leadoff man to open the sixth and Burchart came on for his third relief stint in two days.

Burchart loaded the bases by hitting Bob Churchich and giving up a bunt single to Steve Johnson. However, with the bases loaded, he struck out Alex Walter, got Wayne Kissler to hit into a force play at the plate and struck out Bob Brand to end the threat and the inning.

Burchart closed off Nebraska rallies in both games of Friday's twin bill and, after a shaky start, he closed the door again Saturday. The loss left Nebraska at 3-6 in the Big Eight and 4-11 for the season.

Charlie Seeking 100-Meter Record

Matson, Greene Featured at Drake

Des Moines, Ia. (AP) — Gigantic Randy Matson and ballet-fast Charlie Greene will elbow for attention during the 40th edition of the Drake Relays next weekend.

Matson's effort to become the first to score a triple double here and Green's attempt to set a world record in a special 100-meter dash probably will be the major attraction, since Jimmy Ryun, sensational Kansas miler, is not expected to compete in his specialty.

Ryun, who last year joined a long string of outstanding runners unable to erase the four-minute mile here, is expected to concentrate on relay events.

The muscular Matson, one of the outstanding champions back, is a solid favorite to win his third straight Drake discus title Friday, then follow up the next day with his third consecutive shot put crown.

Charlie Greene
Ready to Run

In the process, the mighty Texas A&M weightman is expected to erase the two Drake marks, both well below his 70-foot-7¼ world shot put standard and his 201-8 NCAA discus mark.

Nebraska's Greene is passing up a chance to become only the second sprinter in relays history to win three consecutive 100-yard dash titles to compete in the special 100-meter event.

Greene, looking forward to the 1968 Olympics at Mexico City, wanted to get some experience in the metric dash—which is 109 yards, 1 foot 1 inch.

In an effort to push Greene to the record, officials are trying to line up the strongest field available.

Greene, NCAA indoor and outdoor sprint king, won the 100-yard event here in 9.3 seconds a year ago and in 9.4 the year before but was deprived of a record because of a favoring wind.

Van Nelson of St. Cloud, Minn. State will be shooting for a second double. An an unheralded sophomore a year ago, Nelson won the three-mile in 13:29.2— 25 seconds faster than the record — and the six-mile in 28:48.6.

Oklahoma has a good chance of eliminating the oldest relay record on the Drake books — Abilene Christian's 40.5 clocking in 1957 in the 440. The Sooners did 40.3 in the Texas Relays.

Despite there being a very small segment of Nebraska football fans who were prone to challenge that Bob Devaney is among the greatest coaches in the game today after bowl losses to Alabama, the Husker Duke has lost no prestige among his peers.

The highly successful NU coach will be busier than ever this summer, so busy in fact that he will have to pass up the Lincoln Country Club Swingfest, and it has nothing to do with his newly-acquired duties as athletic director.

Devaney has been awarded two major coaching jobs for the summer, one taking him to Germany, the other to Atlanta, Ga.

The NU leader will join Texas coach Darrell Royal and Alabama's Bear Bryant as coaches of the South team against the North, coached by Michigan State's Duffy Daugherty, Notre Dame's Ara Parseghian and Washington's Jim Owens.

Nothing To Do With Defeat

The fact that Devaney has joined forces with the South and coaches Bryant and Royal has nothing to do with his losses to Bryant.

Before you Northern loyalists begin a march on the Stadium because Devaney has sold out Northern Nebraska to the Confederates, it's just a matter of how sponsors of an Armed Services game drew the dividing lines.

"They just decided to put the entire Big Eight into the South because we have more teams that would be considered South than we do North," Devaney explained.

This game will be played in Frankfort, Germany, and is being sponsored by the Armed Services, taking players over from the U.S. for each team for the June 26 contest.

A Dubious Honor

Devaney's other summer coaching duties will come as head coach of the West team in the Coaches' All-American game in Atlanta in July, an honor which Devaney terms dubious.

"There were 17 all-Americans named from the East and only 7 from the West," he declares. "Three of those from the West were juniors so they can't play and another one isn't going, so that leaves us with a few problems in the West camp."

Since coming to Nebraska, Devaney has been one of the more sought after coaches for special all-star games and he has had to turn down several offers because his own team has been busy during the Christmas Holidays for the past five years, a time when most of the all-star contests are played.

Huskers Draw Scouts

Also since Devaney came to Nebraska, Husker practice sessions have been on the map of most pro football talent scouts, but this spring, it has drawn interest from several high school coaches interested in finding what makes Devaney-coached teams tick.

Among the pro people passing through the NU camp the past week were Bill Austin, head coach of the Pittsburgh Steelers, and Bucko Kilroy, a former pro football meanie now with the Dallas Cowboys.

Kilroy is the fellow who sued Life Magazine and collected back in 1954 when they ran a story and pictures, focusing mostly on Kilroy, entitling the article, "Savagery On Sunday."

"I had about 50 players testifying in my favor and 25 against me," he notes in recalling the trial. "The trouble with most of those magazines that do things like that is that they don't have any money so there is no sense in suing.

"But Life was a part of Time and I knew they had a little money, so I took some of it."

Austin spoke very highly of former Husker Lloyd Voss, who was traded by Green Bay to Pittsburgh last summer.

Austin was the man mainly responsible for getting Voss at Green Bay, having practically lived with the big Husker while both Green Bay and Nebraska were in Miami for football post-season games in 1963.

Other ex-Huskers on Austin's team at Pittsburgh are Bob Hohn and Tony Jeter.

Hedrick Quits Clowning To Win Rodeo Honors

Clown Joe Hedrick showed he's pretty good at being serious, too, as the Fort Hays, Kan., State performer won the men's all-around championship Saturday night at the 1967 University of Nebraska Intercollegiate Rodeo at the State Fairgrounds Building.

Hedrick had to do it the hard way, too, a big win on the toughest bareback bronc available turning the trick. Hedrick amassed 61 out of 100 points staying eight seconds aboard 19-year-old "Ridgerunner," who's not ridden very often.

Defending champ Butch Terrell had a chance at the all-around title in the last event, Brahma bull riding, but went off a fraction of a second after the buzzer. Terrell was going with a sprained left ankle suffered in the steer wrestling in the afternoon.

There was a new girls' champ, Ann Wendall of Nebraska University taking this year's honors, with defending champ Sandra Helmer of Kearney second.

Matson Sets Mark

College Station, Tex. (AP)—Randy Matson broke his own world record when he put the shot 71 feet 5½ inches here Saturday in a triangular field meet between Texas A&M, Baylor and Texas Tech.

The huge Aggie set his previous mark of 70 feet, 7¼ inches here in 1965 during a Southwest Conference track and field meet.

The throw came on the day the university had proclaimed "Randy Matson Day" with mayors of both College Station and nearby Bryan participating.

Matson tore to shambles the one-time shot-put goal of 60 feet. In his last 77 meets, he has surpassed 60 feet, and in 31 of those appearances, he has thrown 66 feet or better. He has bettered 70 feet six times.

Northeast Teams Win 'Y' Crowns

Kansas City — Lincoln's two Northeast branch YMCA entries in the five-state basketball championships captured titles here Saturday.

The 12-and-under team, made up of Brownell School youngsters, edged Johnson County, Kan., 27-22 in its first game and won the title with a 42-27 win over the Kansas City Steelers.

The 15-and-under team, the Northeast junior high Bullets, won three games.

They stopped Salina, Kan., 52-20, and Johnson County, 78-39, to gain the finals against Omaha's entry. The Lincoln quintet won the championship game, 67-57.

North Platte Kart Capital

By JOHN HINES

This afternoon in North Platte engines will be revved up once again to start a big five-month season in one of the nation's hotbeds of go-karting.

The Central Nebraska Karting Association of North Platte has a schedule of 13 races, to be held every other Sunday, and a Nebraska Centennial Race Sept. 3.

That event is expected to attract some of the top karters from across the nation, including many who are returning home after competing in the nationals in Riverside, Calif.

North Platte and Scottsbluff have International Karting Association sanctioned tracks and Fremont also has an active track.

North Platte's track was built in 1960 at ⅛ mile, expanded to ¼ mile in 1961 and then remodeled into a ⅜ mile asphalt track in 1965.

Karting is truly a family sport where anyone can take part with nine classes beginning with 10-year-olds. A sportsman class for all those karts stored away in the garage will be new this year. Classifications are determined by different engine specifications.

The gasoline-powered karts can be no longer than 60 inches nor wider than 40 and have a 26-inch height limitation. The vehicles must weigh from 85 to 105 punds.

The CNKA maintains a strict set of safety-first rules for its competition, minimizing dangerous driving but not standing in the way of speed.

The speed on the straightaways at North Platte averages about 65 m.p.h.—a far cry from the 32 m.p.h. most of the karts were going when the North Platte track first opened.

Nebraska boasts some of the nation's top kart drivers, including North Platte's Verlin and Dave Homan, Claude Faulkner and Ed Thieman; Bob Cram of Alliance; Lee and Carol Schwartzkoph of Scottsbluff and Bobby Fish and Phil Wilson Jr. of Lincoln.

Dave Homan has had a fifth place finish in the nationals and Cram was third in the winter nationals in San Jose, Calif.

DeVicenzo Takes Lead At Dallas

Dallas, Tex. (AP) — Roberto DeVicenzo, with a sensational iron and putting performance Saturday, fired a six-under-par 64 for a one-stroke lead in the $100,000 Greater Dallas Open Golf Tournament.

DeVicenzo, defending champion, had 134 for 36 holes, replacing the first round leader, Gay Brewer of Dallas, the Masters champion, who took a 71 for 135. Bob Goalby fired a 66 and also had 135.

The Argentine said the greens on the 6,777-yard Oak Cliff Country Club course, still wet from the rain that caused postponement of the second round Friday, were to his liking.

Patrick Swaps Pucks for Soccer

New York (AP)—Patrick, a revered name in professional ice hockey for more than a half century, has put its foot inside the door of big league soccer in the person of Muzz Patrick, the new general manager of the New York Skyliners of the United Soccer Association.

"I'm sure that pro soccer will attract a lot of hockey fans," Patrick said. "Both are continuous action sports. A lot of plays are similarly set up like trying to get the puck in hockey or the ball in soccer to an open man. Some of the defensive aspects are similar, too."

For almost 30 years as a player, coach and general manager, Muzz was associated with the New York Rangers of the National Hockey League.

"My father once told me that it took quite a while to educate the American sports public as far as hockey was concerned," Muzz recalled.

"I remember in 1946 when I was the general manager of the St. Paul team in the old United States Hockey League, they played the first hockey game ever in Houston. There was close to a sell-out, but half the house got up and walked out at the end of the second period.

"They didn't know that there were three periods to a hockey game."

Grand-Slammer

Cincinnati (UPI) — Vada Pinson, who has had more than 200 hits four different seasons with Cincinnati, holds a club record for the Reds with six grand slam homers during his career.

Dorothy Story looks on as Rex and Max get 'Sammy' ready for action in the fourth annual Capital City Horse and Pony Club Show.

Capital City Horse Show Scheduled

Having fun family style would best describe the participation of the John Story family in the fourth annual Capital City Horse and Pony Club show slated next weekend.

John and Dorothy Story and their sons, Rex 13, and Max 12, will all play prominent parts in the show again this year just as they have every year since its origination.

Rex and Max will enter several events with their favorite Shetland ponies. John is currently vice president of the club and Dorothy will serve as show secretary.

The affair is slated for Friday and Saturday at the Nebraska State Fairgrounds. Show times are 7 p.m. on Friday and 9:30 a.m., 1 and 7 p.m. on Saturday.

Robert McCandless is this year's chairman and president of the group is O. W. Smith. Some 400 horses are expected to enter.

The Story story on horses started some years ago before Rex and Max were even born. John purchased his first Shetland to fulfill a desire of daughter Sherrill.

Sherrill is now Mrs. John Richardson, but before her marriage she was involved in the club shows also. She was a queen's attendant at the first such affair. A little granddaughter Debbie, 1½, will probably be John and Dorothy's next club entry.

The family has an ideal setup for such a recreation venture. They built a new home some five years ago four miles north of Lincoln on a 17-acre tract.

The livestock population at the Story farm also includes ducks, chickens and sheep. One unique experiment is working out well for Mr. Story. He has cross-bred some Shetland mares with a burro. He hopes to soon have a most unusual four-horse wagon team.

One of the standbys at the Story farm is Sammy, a 10-year-old Shetland stallion who was once a reserve senior champion at the Nebraska State Fair where the Storys' have exhibited their ponies for 11 years.

Mr. Story is a 25-year employe as a mail clerk with the Veterans Administration Regional Office. But this weekend it will be strictly pony business at the Capital City Horse and Pony Club show.

More truck per buck.

The prices up there speak for themselves. And if you're a professional trucker, everything else up there will, too. But if you're not, let us explain.

Our higher frame section modulus means that Dodge frames have greater beam strength (resistance to bending) than the other two. A one-piece, I-beam front axle with leaf springs gives two advantages: a steady ride and longer front tire life because it holds front wheel alignment better. There are many weather conditions between a light mist and a torrential downpour. Dodge's variable-speed windshield wipers take care of both and everything in between. With Dodge's Orscheln parking brake, you can adjust the brake from the driver's seat with your fingers, even while driving. There's no crawling under the truck to do it.

One more thing. The pickup that's more truck per buck is also a beauty of a pickup. Your Dodge Truck Dealer wants you to come in and see for yourself. Why not do it soon?

Bright grille and bumper, side moulding, whitewall tires and wheel covers shown on the Dodge truck in the illustration are optional at extra cost.

Lincoln Fisherman Sets State Record

By Chuck Roberts

Alfred Calvert's super-sized fishing tackle, purchased for a South Dakota fishing trip this month made him the object of some good-natured ribbing but the kidders quit kidding when it helped him catch what may prove to be the largest Northern Pike to come out of that state this year.

It weighed 28½ lbs., one full pound more than the Nebraska State Record and a South Dakota guide said if he had caught the fish a few days before, it might have toppled that state's record

The trip by Calvert of 1115 So. 40th, his son, Dr. Tom Calvert of Lincoln, Mary Lyman of Lincoln and Myron Kuhl of Plainview, staretd at Oahe Dam near Ft. Pierre on a high note of anticipation. When they walked into a bait store there to meet their guide, he opened up a walk-in freezer and showed them two northerns about 25 lbs. and one of them was still breathing.

"It would be rather safe to say that 'anxiety reigned' that first night." Lyman said. "It was a little hard to get to sleep."

The first day the Nebraska fishing party hit the waters of the Great Oahe Dam, rain dampened their spirits and mud made walking along the steep banks risky at best.

Calvert, who calls his super-sized fish catch "about as skillful as winning the Irish Sweepstakes," said he didn't have a premonition about catching any big fish but admitted that for some reason "I looked around when I got there for a good place to land it if I did catch one."

The group and guide had traveled more than 50 miles that morning by 4-wheel drive truck, trailing a boat, to reach a place where the guide thought might be "pretty good."

Calvert's heavy-duty rod, and star-drag reel loaded with 30 lb. test line was attached to a wire rigging with two hooks that had a six-inch chub on one and a piece of frozen herring on the other.

Fishing stories get long but this one was over pretty shorly. The bobber dissappeared. Calvert picked up the rod and came back on it.

"I pulled and kept reeling and nothing happened." he recalled. "I tightened the drag up to about 20 lbs of pull and kept reeling."

Calvert remembered there was a big log close to where he landed him and he was worried about the fish getting wrapped around it.

"If he had, it would have been all over but for some reason he didn't go that way"

The Lincoln fisherman recalls that they had the Oahe lunker in the net "four or five times" before he was finally walked in for keeps.

The guide, described as "more excited than the fishermen," said if the fish had been caught before it spawned it probably would have weighed another five pounds. The fish measured 47⅛ in. long and 22 in. around.

The group didn't quit with that fish. They landed another 20 that averaged 10 lbs apiece.

Calvert is quick to discount any fishermen's fast notions that all that is necessary to get a fish like that is to visit Oahe.

But Calvert still thinks the lake is "pretty great."

It's no secret that Harvey Harger of Fairbury hooked these two largemouths, eight and 4½ pounds, on a purple worm. But where? Understandably, the avid angler will say only "from two different ponds."

Operation Outdoors

By Riley Hall

If you are like myself, you've probably neglected to perform certain winter fishing tackle lay-up chores after last fall's fishing.

There is no better time than the present to sit down and check out the well-being of your most expensive and vulnerable item—your reel.

According to most fishing experts, more reels wind up on the junk pile from neglect than any other cause.

Cleanliness and lubrication are essential to smooth, flawless reel performance. How these maintenance tasks are handled greatly determines how well it will operate.

Must Be Cleaned

A reel that has been dropped in the sand must be stripped and cleaned before further use. Even those that have been used only in a boat can profit from an internal scrubbing.

Durt has a way of accumulating on greased parts and eventually "gumming up" the works.

The first step in disassembling a reel is to use a screwdriver that precisely fits the screws; a poor match results in ugly mars. Carefully arranging the parts according to the order in which they were removed will permit easy reassembly.

Good Cleaner

Carbon tetrachloride is best for cleaning, but other solvents will do if thoroughly dried. A toothbrush removes grime and grit from hard-to-reach areas.

Lubricate as follows: grease the gears and oil the bearings. However, grease the handle post (a bearing), and oil the level-wind mechanism on casting reels (even though it's a gear).

Multipurpose or household oils and greases will work, but not as well as special reel lubricants designed to function at certain friction tolerance levels and remain unaffected by exposure to water.

Never Pack Interior

Use just enough to cover the working parts, and never pack the interior of a reel. Merely place a light skim of grease on the reel's gear housing and frame to retard rust.

Now is also the time to detect worn parts that need replacing. Getting the part or shipping the reel to the manufacturer for repairs will halt any delays during the fishing season.

State Record

The schedule of solunar periods for the following week as printed below has been taken from John Alden Knight's Solunar Tables. Plan your day so that you will be fishing good territory, hunting good cover during these times if you wish to find the best sport that each has to offer. The tables are not a guarantee you will catch fish or see game during the period, however.

The major periods begin at the time shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours thereafter, and are in black-face type. The minor periods are somewhat shorter in duration.

Pheasant Needs Good Cover

Odds of 250 to 1 can hardly be considered favorable, but that is what the pheasant hen faces when establishing a nest in alfalfa, says M. O. Steen, Game Commission director.

Ten-year studies in Clay County showed that only 1 of every 250 pheasant nests in alfalfa is successful. The remainder of the nests and many hens are destroyed by farming operations, such as mowing and raking. The alfalfa mower, said Steen, clearly deserves the title of "grim reaper".

Nebraska's pheasant population is totally dependent upon environment, Steen emphasized. This includes nesting cover that offers not only concealment, but also freedom from disturbance. For a hen to lay and incubate a clutch of eggs takes about 35 days or longer. If the nest is in alfalfa, the period between mowings is very seldom long enough to permit a batch.

76ers Favored In NBA

Philadelphia (AP)—The Philadelphia 76ers are favored to bring the long professional basketball season to an end today by closing out the San Francisco Warriors in the best-of-7 game National Basketball Association championship playoff.

The Eastern champion 76ers lead the Warriors 3-1 and have the advantage in the fifth game of their home court, on which they have been just short of invincible this season.

This could be the climax of the greatest season ever for 7-foot-1 Wilt Chamberlain. He appears a lead pipe cinch to add his first major championship to his many laurels.

Wilt put it beautifully last week when he said. "The importance in winning this title is so that I don't have to explain all summer why I've never been on a championship team."

Chamberlain has scored only 62 points in the series so far, but anyone who has followed the games, including San Francisco Coach Bill Sharman, will tell you he has been the difference. Sharman echoed what players and coaches have been saying all season—he doesn't have to score a point to kill you.

Prep Panorama

By Rick Akin

In anticipation of what I had said, didn't say or should have said. I've been known to launch out of the sack, jump into a pair of Levi's and zip to the front porch for the morning paper.

Cold cement and bare feet don't match up very well. It's the best waker-upper since the bass drum. No barefoot boy, am I.

Trackmen have been known to have a little easier time of it in shoes (preferably with spikes on them), too.

Can't Have Everything

On the first lap of his mile run at the MBN Track Meet McKeeman lost a shoe on the first lap. No quitting for Bob, though. He kept his stride and poise, winning the race in a tight field.

"I started off fine, but about 150 yards out, I was trying to get ahead," he said.

"I guess I got a little too close to the guy in the next lane, and he spiked me," Bob said. "The next thing I knew my shoe was off."

All didn't go awry, however.

"Fortunately, my sock stayed on. It did feel kind of funny, though."

That's nice. Just can't think of anything funnier than nearly a mile in stocking feet. But McKeeman did make adjustments and all wasn't so bad.

Shortened Up

"I shortened my stride a little bit," he said. "But I don't think I lost any. I stayed about the same (in the field)."

It was fortunate for Fullerton that he didn't. Shoeless Bob usually runs the mile in about five minutes but got down to 4:53.5.

"I had to," he said. "They were pushing me, and I had to get under five to win."

Just a half second behind were teammate Bill Morgan and Dan Kaup of Albion.

Roadblock in O'Neill

Something in the way might have told McKeeman to get back into bed. It just might not be his day.

It happened at the O'Neill Invitational last week.

In the two-mile relay a runner picked up the lead and appeared headed for first place. How nice to breeze along with little fear of intrusion.

But out of nowhere along came a spectator who stepped onto the track sending our victory-bound friend to the cinders. The field overtook him.

OU-NU Merger Bill Approved

Nebraska legislators passed a bill allowing the merger of the University of Nebraska and Omaha University. If the residents of Omaha endorse the proposition at a special election, the state will take over OU by July 1, 1968. Omaha University would become The University of Nebraska at Omaha.

The bill, LB736, was considered a big part of Gov. Norbert Tiemann's legislative program.

Other legislative action included a lot of talk and final decision to accept for introduction a bill delaying the implementation of the state sales tax from May 1 to June 1. This is to insure a smoother acceptance of the tax.

A bill calling for the abolishment of the Nebraska Power Review Board was killed by the legislature's Public Works Committee.

Tighter control over the spending of all state agencies, centralized in the governor's office, is the main point of a bill, LB172, that won unanimous first round approval in the Unicameral last week.

Kuhn Praises Tiemann's Work

Arnold Kuhn, president of the Nebraska Press Assn. and editor of the Hemingford Ledger, said during the group's 93rd annual meeting in Lincoln that Gov. Norbert Tiemann's assistance and liaison work during the 1967 Unicameral "has certainly contributed to the speed of the lawmakers."

Kuhn said, "It seems to me Tiemann is a man in a hurry. He's done a good job the first 100 days but he has quite a few to go."

Turbine Car Entered In Indianapolis Race

Chicago (AP) — A fiery orange-red turbine car driven by Parnelli Jones may start another revolutionary swing in next month's Indianapolis 500 as significant to auto racing as the onrush of rear engine machines in the last three years.

The two-foot high, kerosene-burning racer is to be entered by veteran Andy Granatelli, whose hard luck episodes with the bellowing, supercharged V-8 Novis have become part of 500 lore.

For three years, Granatelli and his colleagues have worked in virtual secrecy building the STP Paxton Turbocar, born from computorized findings based on structural and mechanical knowledge of successful Indy cars of the last five years.

It is powered by a 260-pound Pratt & Whitney Type ST6B-62, Free Turbine engine rated a 550 horse power at 6,230 r.p.m. It is the same plant rated for aircraft use at 1,200 hours of full running and has been installed in high speed trains scheduled between Montreal and Toronto in July.

The racer earlier this year lapped the Indianapolis Speedway at 163.2 m.p.h. It can top 220 on the back straightaway. It can ram from 0 to 60 in less than 3.5 seconds and from 0-100 in less than 4.5.

It has four-wheel drive, 12-inch disc brakes with recirculating brake fluid cooling, and a radical three-square-foot flap that raises behind the driver to catch the wind as a braking aid and stabilizer.

Granatelli says the racer will go five miles to a gallon of kerosene compared to about 2½ miles per gallon of alcohol for the piston machines. A 48-gallon tank is deep in the vitals of the car.

"There is no work to be done on the engine, giving us more time to devote on brakes, drive-train, wheels and other mechanical details," says Granatelli.

"The car should run as smoothly for the 500 miles as an elevator going up and down. Everything being equal and perfect, I feel it should turn Indy at 173 m.p.h. I'm not saying we will, but the potential is there."

Raleigh, N.C. (AP) — Kathy Whitworth and Susie Maxwell stayed out front Saturday in the Raleigh Ladies Invitational Open Golf Tournament, but got company from Sandra Palmer, who broke par.

The attractive Texan took 70 strokes around the par 37-35-72 Raleigh Country Club course for a 36-hole total of 144 to tie Miss Whitworth and Miss Maxwell, both of whom matched par for the second straight day.

NY Stock Exchange Getting Older . . . But Faster

The New York Stock Exchange will celebrate 175 years of history in May.

Vice President Hubert Humphrey will commemorate the founding of the exchange in 1792 with a mid-day speech from the steps of Federal Hall on May 17.

Federal Hall is a few yards from where the exchange was founded by a small group of merchants and brokers, and marks the spot where George Washington took the oath of office as President in 1789.

An institution almost as old as the nation itself, the exchange's own growth over almost two centuries has reflected and helped stimulate the transformation of the once-rural nation into a major industrial power.

Canals, Rails

The growth in both the number and nature of companies whose stock was listed for trading in the exchange's central auction market could serve as a history of U.S. economic growth.

These range from the canal building concerns of the 1830s to the early railroads and first major industrial corporations of the late 1800s — and the space age companies of today.

No less than 40% of the 1,280 listed companies on the Big Board have been listed in the past ten years. Many are in industries unheard of a few generations ago.

The last quarter-century has seen more growth than any time in the exchange's history. Today more than 11 billion shares, with a market value of some $482.5 billion, are listed on the exchange. Volume in 1966 totaled 2.2 billion shares, more than four times that of 1892, 1917 and 1942 combined.

Half a Million

Today, half a million miles of telephone and telegraph wires link the trading floor with more than 3,800 offices of exchange member firms here and abroad.

Currently on an average day, these funnel in some 86,000 buy and sell orders—representing some $579 million in stocks.

The value of shares traded in a single hour often exceeds the $80 million in securities that were consolidated by Treasury Secretary Alexander Hamilton to pay Revolutionary War debts.

Every Half Hour

Computers drive the exchange's international stock ticker network and produce an index of all listed stocks every half-hour throughout the trading day.

New operations promise to keep the exchange abreast of the demands of the 1970s when an even more accelerated growth of securities trading is expected.

Five Consecutive Gains in Securities

The Dow Jones industrial average soared 23.44 to a new 1967 high of 883.18, putting the closely watched indicator just below the 900 mark, which many analysts feel is a major plateau in the market's recovery from last year's hazardous decline.

The trading pace speeded up to 50,351,281 shares compared with 40,048,406 shares the previous week and with 46,723,840 shares in the same week a year ago. It was the first time trading averaged 10 million shares a day in more than a month.

The list got off to a good start and scored some of its best gains in the first two sessions. Later on, enthusiasm waned somewhat as traders wondered if the rapid rate of advance could be sustained.

Reasons for the burst of strength were numerous, ranging from favorable individual corporate news items to increasing signs of the highly anticipated second half economic revival.

Economic Reports Seem Bit Rosy

New York (P) — A series of sunny economic reports flowed out of Washington last week. If they seemed a little rosy, it may be because it has been a chilly year so far on the business front.

The chief White House economic adviser, Gardner Ackley, conceded the first quarter was a bit more sluggish than President Johnson anticipated when he proposed a tax increase to take effect July 1.

"The second quarter will remain relatively slow," Ackley said, "but we still expect a strong recovery of demand later this year."

Not Enough

Ackley said business conditions hadn't changed enough to eliminate the need for a 6% surcharge on corporate and personal income taxes.

Walter W. Heller, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Eisenhower, said the worst of the business adjustment was over and that the nation's economy would be operating at full speed by winter.

In Washington, the Commerce Dept. pointed to a possible upturn: a rise in personal spending in March to a record annual rate of $613.1 billion.

Declines In Grains

A corn carryover of 600 to 650 million bushels is in prospect this season.

A private estimate of corn stocks in all positions indicates about 2.6 billion bushels. The government will report Monday.

The wheat market had several features last week. There was almost continuous scattered rainfall throughout the southwest. Other exporting countries reported surplus crops.

Fat Cattle Sluggish

Omaha (UPI) — The Livestock Foundation of Omaha said fat cattle receipts were down from one year ago on the Omaha livestock market this past week.

The foundation, in its weekly report, described fat cattle action through the week as sluggish.

With demand narrow and buyers watching an uncertain dressed meat trade, fed steers sold mostly 25, instances 50, lower while fat heifers were steady to 25 lower. Week's steer top 24.75; high on heifers 24.10.

Butcher supplies were increased slightly last week over the previous week and the price pattern was sprinkled with both ups and downs. Set against each other the ups appeared to have just a shade the better of it as butchers sold mostly steady.

Butcher top for the week was 18.75. Sows also worked out mostly steady with spots on late sales that could have been 25 lower. Week's high on sows 16.50.

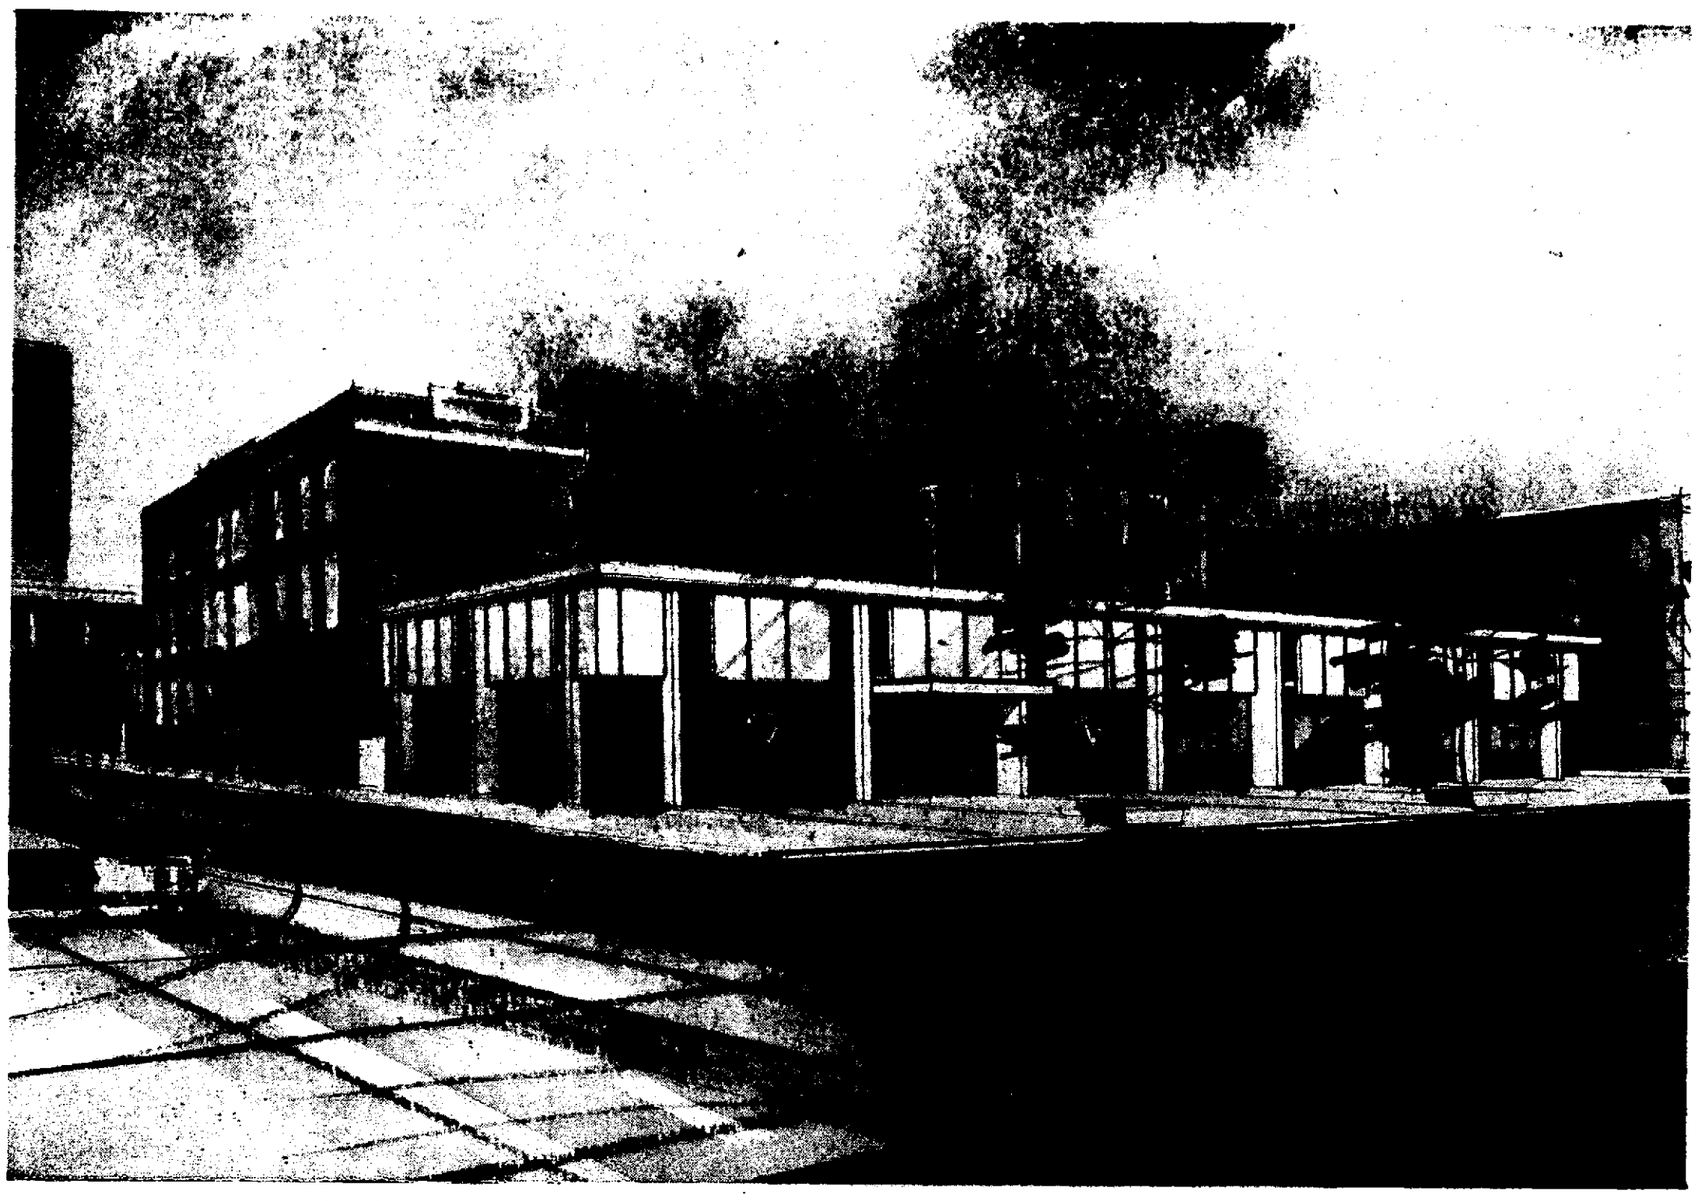
YWCA Plans To Renovate Now—Add Space Later



Architect's concept of the expanded YWCA facilities as prepared by Schaumberg & Freeman.

By HOLLY ROSENBERGER

Asking for building funds is something the YWCA hasn't done for 36 years, but they're doing it this year in a combined campaign with the YMCA.

The present YW building has been standing for 35 of those years and it badly needs renovation in several areas. Accordingly, immediate proposals as outlined by executive director Mrs. Donald W. Gerhard basically concern "delayed maintenance."

This will include projects such as modernizing wiring, plumbing and safety systems, plus expansion of health, physical education and recreation facilities. Two main purposes of this expansion will be to meet expanding demands for classes and make possible increased coeducational facilities.

The $270,000 allotted to the YW in the current YMCA-YWCA joint campaign will little more than cover the work outlined by Mrs. Gerhard and building-modernization committee chairman Mrs. Evar Anderson.

This doesn't mean, though, that the YW has no long range proposals to meet present problems of inadequate facilities.

Three main areas that need attention are youth programs for those 5 to 35, young homemaker programs and a food service.

Space is the most critical factor in these ideas. An addition to the present building on the 50' by 100' lot at 15th and N, east of the present building, is proposed.

Descendants of Couples Wed 100 Years Ago Are Honorees

Mrs. Bessie Lattin Williams holds the 1866 wedding certificate of the Clinton Lattins, who were married by Judge Luke Lavender.

BY LUCI MIDCAP

Who knows? Is it fate or merely coincidence that among Nebraskans prominent in centennial celebrations are direct descendants of the first couples married in Lincoln?

Centennial fame belongs to Mrs. Rosa Hendricks of Bennet, being honored today as the oldest living descendant of Lancaster County settlers, and to Miss Judi Lattin, who is Fremont's Centennial Queen.

Indications are that Mrs. Hendricks' parents, Charles and Margery Genuchi, were the first couple married here. Their marriage certificate, now owned by their granddaughter Mrs. Sterling Glover, is dated Apr. 4, 1866.

A Little Later

Only a little later, on Apr. 16, Judi's great-grandparents, Clinton Eli and Mary Elizabeth Lattin, were married in Lincoln—then the settlement of Lancaster Center, comprised of five buildings.

Judge Luke Lavender officiated at both the Genuchis' and the Lattins' weddings.

Mrs. Hendricks, 93 years old, was the Genuchis' fifth child and "she is the oldest county descendant we know of, after interviewing about 35 Century Families," said Mrs. Elinor Brown, president of the Lincoln and Lancaster County Historical Society.

The Society is holding a Century Family banquet and honoring Mrs. Hendricks at 1 p.m. today at Pershing Auditorium.

Of course, it's doubtful the Charles Genuchis— whose homestead a mile east of Bennet is still in the family—thought about their daughter Rosa May being honored in 1967.

She told about the time "Grandpa had gone to the Weeping Water mill to get the wheat ground" and an Indian couple appeared at the homestead.

Mrs. Genuchi let the couple stay the night and the squaw sang to the Genuchi baby while Mrs. Genuchi spent "the longest night she ever lived."

Friend for Life

But the pioneer woman had made a firned for life, her granddaughter said, and every time the Indian traveled her way, he'd bring her strings of beads.

Mrs. Reid recalled another tale of the "old-fashioned hospitality" that bound plainsmen together.

"Grandma used to tell us," she said, "about the man who rode up on a horse and spent the night at their homestead." In the morning, he paid the Genuchis the going rate of 70 cents for the lodging and breakfast—and left with the explanation, "I'm from a Georgia chain gang and I'm escaping to Canada. I want to start over."

The Genuchis' daughter Rosa remembers community get-togethers at her rural school, when on Friday evenings the children would try to out-do their parents in spell-downs and cipher-downs.

Spaniards Whisper Sweet Nothings

By Kelly Smith

Madrid, Spain — A pretty girl strolls down a boulevard. A strange man walks by and whispers sweet nothings in her ear.

In any other country, the girl would bash him. Not in Spain. Not a Spanish senorita. This is Don Juan's homeland, and when it comes to matters of the heart, the centuries haven't changed much.

These titterings on the sidewalk are as embedded in Spanish custom as the siesta and the bullfight. Those murmurings in the ear are called piropos.

Tourists Panic

The Spanish take their piropos seriously. For a woman to pretend dismay borders on insulting na-

Centennial Families

A favorite Sunday afternoon activity, Mrs. Hendricks added, was singing around the old organ — which, of course, was a pump organ. Mrs. Hendricks said the most changes she's seen since childhood have been brought by electricity.

They hadn't time to think that a great-granddaughter of theirs would carry on a Nebraska heritage by serving as a queen a hundred years hence — for they had a few current events to think about.

Such as the time a cyclone blew away their eight-month-old son. They found him alive, with his face down in a mud puddle. This baby, Robert became the first husband of Mrs. Bessie Lattin Williams and the father of Robert E. Lattin of Fremont, Judi's father.

Robert wasn't all the cyclone blew "quite a ways," Mrs. Williams said. Part of the Clinton Lattins' wedding certificate disappeared at the same time.

Another day, Indians took another Lattin son, Oliver, but returned him to his parents the same night.

No wonder the Lattins' grandson Robert, when he was a boy, used to plead, "Grandma, tell me some more of those stories!"

Mrs. Lattin (Mary Owens) had come to Nebraska with her mother to flee from the Civil War, in which her father fought. After their marriage, the Lattins settled in the area that is now Capitol Beach, their daughter-in-law recalled.

Besides the Genuchi and Lattin marriages, Lancaster County Court records show two 1866 weddings. These were the unions of Manthenia Porter and Alexander Burd on Sept. 25 and of Maria Booth and Luis Shamp on Dec. 25.

Whose grandsons and daughters will be honored in 2067? Which present Nebraska families will be written about during the bi-centennial? Who knows?

MALE MODES

New Parisian Styles a 'Whopper'? Mais Qui!

U.S. clothes designers — for women and men — must be best! We've stated on several occasions that Carnaby Street's well-ballyhooed men's styles were exaggerated copies, in toto, of fashion features that originated in this country.

Examples are low-slung western pants, turtleneck sweaters, wide Ivy League belts, boots, etc. Now comes a surprising report on the recent Paris women's openings, by one of this nation's most authoritative writers.

"Anybody who says that the Paris collections started a brand new trend this season is telling a great, big, whopping fairy tale. Practically everything that happened over there in the two weeks of showings had already happened long before on Seventh Avenue in New York."

Which proves that both the U.S. men's and women's wear designers are being accorded "the sincerest form of flattery." Right?

Trends

It appears that gray may top blue in fall suits in the stores soon. The latter should stay in second place but both leading colors will be pushed by black, whisky tones and green.

Neckwear is moving away from the cluttered look which characterized MOD's paisleys and geometrics — towards subdued and classic patterns.

They go best with the patterned, colorful dress shirts and clothing — and are most seen in heraldic designs, club figures and sporting motifs.

Press Tips

Make your tie rack neater by picking out and wrapping all the ties you know you will not wear again until next fall. Do the same with shirts, putting them all in a box and storing on a high shelf in the closet.

"It's a little extra bother but wrinkles will come out of trousers faster if you remove the belt before putting pants on a hanger. When laundering a wash-and-wear shirt, remember to turn the pockets inside out and give them a thorough soaping.

Quotes

Parisian women's designer Rosette Mett, "Men will be surpassing women in their desire to clothe themselves handsomely. It's happening in Paris right now. Men's underwear is embroidered with flowers."

Britain's Hardie Amies, arriving at Kennedy Airport, "I would have been more comfortable in a bathrobe on the plane but I demand spiritual comfort as well as physical."

Badly soiled shirts and pants, used in garden or workshop, will come cleaner if soaked for about 15 minutes in hot sudsy water containing half a cup of household ammonia before they're put in washing machine.

Careful brushing of clothes will not do the job as well unless brush or whiskbroom is clean. Give the bristles an occasional wash.

Odd Items

Golfer Sam Snead always wanted to be a tailor. French designer Ruben Torres, who advocates "The Belly-Button Look" for men (ugh!) is now going to bring out "silver underpants for men."

Idea For Skiers — When it gets sub-zero, Eskimos always open the tops of their parkas when exerting themselves — to keep from perspiring!

Mail Bag — "Is it essential that all members of the wedding party for a semi-formal evening wedding wear matching formal wear?" That's the rule, although it's not as inflexible as it used to be. There will be uniformity in the ties, boutonnieres and gloves supplied by the groom.

Remember — Those little loops of thread just behind the lapel buttonhole, to hold the stem of a boutonniere? And the cloth tabs on the front of a shirt which hooked to a trouser button and kept the shirt down?

Golden Wedding Today

1967 Mr. and Mrs. Herman Kroon 1917

Tim Lases Say Vows

The empire lace bodice of the bride's gown of organza was designed with a scalloped neckline. Lace was repeated in cascades in the A-line skirt and as inserts on the Watteau train.

A cluster of pearl-edged lilies caught her veil. She carried a white orchid and yellow roses on a white Bible.

Mrs. Dave Church of Denver was matron of honor and Mrs. Marvin Miller of Alvo was brides matron.

Mrs. Leach at her desk.

Mrs. Leach: 'Job Fascinating'

By HOLLY ROSENBERGER

If someone says that her desk is usually covered with law books, a good guess would be that she's a woman lawyer.

The guess would be wrong, however, in the case of Mrs. Herbert Leach. In her job as assistant reporter for the Nebraska Supreme Court she has come to look at words like "litigant" and "appellate" as everyday.

Mrs. Leach's job doesn't come into being in the courtroom itself—it begins after briefs from lower courts and arguments by lawyers have been presented.

Opinion Edited

After a case has been heard it is assigned to a judge, who writes an opinion. He sends this to Mrs. Leach, who edits it for form, fact and legal citations.

After a further conference with her boss, Walter James, Mrs. Leach has the opinion retyped and printed.

Mrs. Leach finds her job, "very fascinating, with a great amount of detail. It is also confidential — when I leave my desk I forget what the documents contain."

This year marks Mrs. Leach's 17th year with the state and 15th year in her present position. She can't compete with her husband, though. He's worked for the Burlington Railroad more than 40 years.

Cabin on Lake

The Leaches both work, but spring and summer weekends find them off to the lake. They literally built their own cabin at Johnson Lake near Lexington, and Mrs. Leach proudly says, "Everything works beautifully." They also have a large garden at the lake.

Bowling has been Mrs. Leach's favorite method of keeping trim during the year, but pressing duties have forced her to give it up for the time being. She was one of Lincoln's first ten women to roll a 500 series.

BPO Does Prexy

The pressing duty right now is her position as president of Lincoln's BPO Does. She has belonged to the group seven years, as an appointive officer the first year and an elective officer the past six.

Mrs. Leach sums up the group's activities as "working like mad to make money to give away."

Really keeping the group on the run right now are plans for the national Does convention in Lincoln June 11 to 15. Some 1,000 Does and more then 300 husbands are expected. The Lincoln group must plan accommodations plus the full schedule.

'Wonderful People'

As president, Mrs. Leach is especially busy. She comments, "I didn't plan to get involved when I joined, but I found that I love the company and the work we do. They're wonderful people to know and be with."

Mrs. Leach also belongs to Temple Chapter Eastern Star and Naphis Temple #66 Daughters of the Nile. The Leaches attend the Methodist Church.

A favorite neighbor also keeps the Leaches busy. She is Mrs. Leach's mother, Mrs. Ada McCarter, who lives in the other half of the couple's duplex.

Mrs. Leach says, "Mother lives with us, but not quite. We love being able to have her so close, yet she still has her own home." Mrs. Leach's late father was a Senator and president of the State Senate.

Iowa Couple Is Engaged

Lawson, Mo. — Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Damisch Sr. announce the engagement of their daughter Sharron of Cedar Rapids, Ia., formerly of Lincoln, Neb., to Mark F. LaGrange, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph LaGrange of Amana, Ia.

An August wedding is planned.

Miss Sharron Damisch of Cedar Rapids, Ia.

Mini-dress

The mini-shirtdress makes big news: it stops well above the knee and sometimes divides into culottes.

'Fiftieth' Celebration

They will also be hosts at an open house next Sunday at their parents' home at 1150 No. Clarmar.

Mr. and Mrs. Rump were married in Lincoln on Apr. 28, 1917, and have four children, William Rump Jr., Mmes. E. B. Tremaine of Boulder, Colo., Duane Hass of Omaha and Mrs. Ellis Swaim.

They also have 14 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Dennis Holman
(Miss Carolyn Gerner)

Holman Rite Saturday

St. James Methodist Church was the setting for the 7 p.m. wedding of Miss Carolyn Gerner and Dennis R. Holman on Saturday.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arling E. Gerner. Mr. Holman's parents are Mrs. Ethel Holman and Clarence Holman.

Lace appliques accented with pearls adorned the fitted bodice and belled skirt of the bride's peau taffeta gown. The bateau neckline was accented in back with a rose centered fabric bow. A cape train extended to cotillion length.

A tulip petal cap of lace, pearl and crystal caught her veil. She carried white orchids and pompon mums.

Serving as best man was Steve Heidemann. Ushers were Ron A. Gerner and Robert A. Schnell.

After a trip the couple will live at 2049 So. 19th.

May Add 2 Floors

of glass and stone that will add an additional modern look to the street. Although only a lower level and street level are planned for the near future, foundations will be designed so two floors maw be added.

These two floors will be completely connected to the old YW building. It is planned to expand the lower levels of the old and new structures as a youth center.

One of the most successful programs in recent years has been the Teen Canteen for junior high youths. When attendance began swelling to 600, facilities in the Y became far too small. Right now the dances are being held at the First-Plymouth Congregational Church.

Food Service Area

The modernization to meet safety standards in the old building will help this space squeeze, but not enough. An expanded food service area will also be a part of the lower level.

Office and conference areas to be filled by the expanding recreation programs in the old area will have to be on the first floor of the addition.

Expanded facilities for physically handicapped persons will be incorporated in all future planning.

A very long range proposal concerns the possible upper two floors of the addition. YW housing facility, the Annie L. Miller Hall at 1429 N, currently serves 56 young women. There is a waiting list of almost half that number.

YW personnel hope to be able to expand this program to serve more people, and this is one reason for expanding the food service. There is none in the current building across the street from the present YW building.

The building committee includes Mrs. Anderson and Mmes. J. Edmunds Miller, Earl Lampshire, David Walcott, Arthur L. Smith Sr., Clayton Yeutter and Harold Hellweg. It will soon be expanded to include several youths and career women.

Mrs. Merlin Kempke
(Miss Merna Bejvancesky)

Wedding At Wahoo

Wahoo — Czech Presbyterian Church was the setting for the 3 p.m. Saturday wedding of Miss Merna W. Bejvancesky and Merlin M. Kempke, both of Lincoln.

Parents of the couple are Messrs. and Mmes. Edward Bejvancesky of Bullhead City, Ariz., and Maynard Kempke of Falls City.

A Watteau Rose of lace and pearls held her veil. She carried a line cascade of white baby roses.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Dwight Splitt of Lincoln. Maid of honor was Vivian Boening of Lincoln. The Misses Carol Rae Novak and Shirley Morton, both of Lincoln, were bridesmaids.

Best man was Melvin Kempke of Falls City. Other attendants were Dwight Splitt and Tom Lant, both of Lincoln, and Dale Huss of Nebraska City.

Michael Kempke of Falls City, Robert Nau of Lincoln, Dennis Pacal of Malmo, and James Garrett of Nebraska City seated the guests.

After a wedding trip to the west coast, the couple will live at 2761 Cable Ave., Lincoln.

Jr. Women's Club

Members of the Junior Woman's Club will meet at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday at King's Drive In at 40th & South for a dessert luncheon. Miss Helen Snyder, assistant dean, division of student affairs at the University of Nebraska, will be the guest speaker.

Windows Sparkle

Windows are among the most prominent places around the house to show the rigors of winter. Get them sparkling by using old, lint-free cotton clothes soaked in warm, soapy water, to which 6 ounces of liquid chlorine bleach per gallon of water have been added. After letting panes remain wet for 5 minutes, rinse off with clean, damp cloths or a "squeegee."

First Mission Stop in 1919

Chenots Complete 25 Years

By JACK FROST

George Chenot, director of the Peoples City Mission, stopped in Lincoln for one day in 1919 little knowing he would return 23 years later in a different capacity.

In 1919 Chenot was a member of a circus band which played here. He traveled across the nation for six years before something changed his life.

In 1925, while going home on a streetcar in New York City, Chenot passed a Bowery Mission House where midnight services were in progress. He was so stirred that he decided to dedicate his life to mission work. The Chenots came to Lincoln and to the City Mission at 124 So. 9th in 1942. The Lincoln Mission was organized shortly after 1900 and has been in the south 9th location since 1909.

Growing Concern

It has grown from a service to the needy housed in a buliding in the old red light district to where, in 1966, the mission helped 23,508 individuals. Meals served totaled 31,079 and 11,353 (men, women and children) were housed.

The budget for the year was $24,475. Of this, the appropriation from the Lincoln Community Chest was $18,920.

Before coming to Lincoln the Chenots had served as assistant supervisors of the Goodwill Union Mission and Industries at Canton, O. Mrs. Chenot had been in mission work in West Virginia and her husband, after serving as assistant pastor in a Presbyterian Church, spent six years as a missionary in Egypt and North Africa.

On May 1 they will celebrate 25 years at the City Mission.

Charles Sage, registrar at the mission for nine years, said "What can I say about them?" "Nothing, but good. They are wholeheartedly dedicated to mission work.

"He is not an ordinary man. He is one in a million in terms of what he has done to develop the mission . . . always thinking of it and not of himself.

Other words of praise for the Chenots came from mission board chairman Ray Wilson, 3935 A.

'Nice People'

In talking with the mission director, one feels his gruff abruptness and his kind gentleness.

How does he feel about a dinner the board is giving to honor 25 years of service?

"I guess I'll suffer through it," he remarked with a twinkle in his eye. "If we were to get parking spaces in back or more expansion, we would really have something to celebrate."

Mrs. Chenot was caught doing the wife's typical job of house cleaning in their tastefully furnished apartment above the mission.

"I'm sorry you saw me like this—cleaning," she spoke of her job in already spotless surroundings.

How proud the 66-year-old mission veteran is can be illustrated by an "experiment" he uses to prove the men are basically self-sufficent there.

"How many of you men want a job right now?" he asked of seven persons in the reading room.

They all raised their hands, except two. Those two already had night jobs.

Not For Handouts

"I do this to prove to visitors that this is not a place for handouts," he said with a smile. "We try to place the men in jobs and then they pay their way for staying here."

This then is the Chenots, Peoples City Mission directors for 25 years who are proud of their work, which is their life.

Of her husband's work, Mrs. Chenot says, "He's always there when anyone needs him."

Mr. and Mrs. George Chenot

There will be an open house for the public from 3-5 p.m. Apr. 30. The dinner honoring the Chenots will be May 1 at 6:30 p.m. in the Lincoln Center, 15th and N.

Bridge Is Finally Sold

Gales Ferry, Conn. (NC)—They finally sold the Brooklyn bridge to somebody. But it isn't the storied span across New York's East River.

It's a small 40-foot wrought-iron structure in nearby Brooklyn, Conn., scheduled to be abandoned by the state as part of a highway improvement project.

Proud Brownville Congregation

Church Edifice Finished—Debt Free

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Brownville—If this town's Christian Church were one speck prouder, its new steeple would pop off into orbit.

Even minus its 1855 record as "the first religious organization in Nebraska," there would be just cause for jubilation. A new "100% debt-free" edifice has replaced the despair of a few months back that even threatened disbandment.

"A tornado took the first church in 1866 and a fire destroyed the second one," said the pastor of 27 years, the Rev. Ward E. Merritt. "Things looked as bad or worse a couple years ago after financial help offered toward a new building failed to materialize."

Already moving away their 1903 church on the strength of the large pledge, the members were left with nowhere to meet but the town hall. The Brownville Historical Society meanwhile had transformed the old structure into a Little Theater. The group finally voted to rebuild.

With contractor Harry Osborne "refusing a single cent for his services," an impressive brick and marble building became reality for less than $18,000. Volunteer labor saved over half, a notable example being the 900 hours donated by longtime member Charles Clifton.

Dedication Missed

"And after all that, I had a coronary and missed the dedication," grinned the recuperating carnival man. Owner of Silver Star Shows, Clifton winters in Brownville and covers much of the state with summer bookings.

The original walnut pulpit, two ornate chairs and an outside bell were eye-catchers of the Apr. 9 dedication, since they are the only remnants of the first building. The Rev. Joel M. Wood is credited with that structure in 1859, four years after he started preaching in schools and homes.

Limited to evening worship since the Rev. Mr. Merritt started dual duties in 1940, the church has a membership of 135 in a community of little over 200. Several families drive from Peru, Auburn and Nemaha. The pastor himself commutes from Humboldt.

Serving the Verdon church even two years longer than the one here, the minister gave up a third charge several years ago at Shubert. Brownville Christian is his home church. He was enrolled in its Sunday school before starting kindergarten.

Joyous Tears

"I don't believe anyone prayed harder to see this new church come about than did my 92-year-old mother," said the pastor. "A lot of joyous tears were shed upon its completion, not because we're the state's oldest congregation but because we built this church ourselves."

PUT IT ON PENNEY'S TIME PAYMENT PLAN . . . MONTHS TO PAY!

—ON THE HOUSE—

By HELEN HAGGIE

It can be done!

A young matron is so pleased with the refurbishing of a dining room set, she is about to shout to the world to come and see it.

"We bought our home and didn't have enough money to buy all the furniture and do all the things we wanted to do," she says and goes on:

"Mother had given me a dining room set — 'just to keep you all eating in the dining room and you can sell it when you can afford to purchase the set you really want'."

"At first I was skeptical. It was a dining room set which had been in our old home when I was a child. I remembered it as dark and gloomy.

Grown Up A Bit

"Guess I've grown up a bit, for when I looked at the set again, I discovered the graceful lines of the Duncan Phyfe line. The solid mahogany table has the pedestal and the brass claw feet. The chairs are the type with a rosette carved in the crossbar.

"I did some research and discovered that I could remove the dark finish and lighten the wood. It was some task but patience and following instructions brought out the wood beautifully. I am so proud of it now."

"Then I selected a light damask and covered the chair seats!

It wasn't as much of a job as I thought it would be I carefully cut the new seat covers with the pattern from the old and used a stapler to attach the damask to the seat.

Saved Money

"Fortunately, John likes to this sort of thing—and when I think of the money we've saved I am so grateful to mother. She loves the "new" look of our dining room, too."

Refinishing wood is a job but a very satisfying one if a person has patience and determination. Before starting on any such job though, a person should read a book on refinishing—and know exactly what he is facing. Botched jobs can be pretty horrible.

HOUSE OF THE WEEK — Garrison Overhang Will 'Fortify' Living Space

This second-story projection, excellent for warding off Indian attacks in the pioneer days, has the practical, modern-day advantage of providing more living space.

An example of this is shown in the floor plans of the Garrison-type Colonial designed for the House of the Week series by architect William Chirgotis.

4 Bedrooms

Because of the extra 3 feet extending beyond the dimensions of the basic part of the house, the second floor provides enough area for four bedrooms and two bathrooms, in addition to ample closet space

The master bedroom has a private bath, fully tiled and with a stall shower, and a dressing alcove flanked by two sizable closets, one of which is a walk-in.

The main bathroom, readily accessible to the three other bedrooms from the upstairs foyer, is also fully tiled and has a tub, shower, towel storage closet and a built-in mirrored vanity.

Large Foyer

Upon entering the main floor of this house, one moves into a large foyer, 13 feet wide, centrally located to provide immediate access to all areas without taking unnecessary steps.

To the right of the foyer, an arched opening leads directly into the living room, which has a charming Colonial fireplace centered on the end wall

The dining room is separated from the living room by another archway, large enough to act as a kind of divider yet not so large that it closes off the rooms from each other.

Still another archway, on the left wall of the foyer, leads to a convenient lavatory with a built-in vanity and full mirror

Beamed Ceiling

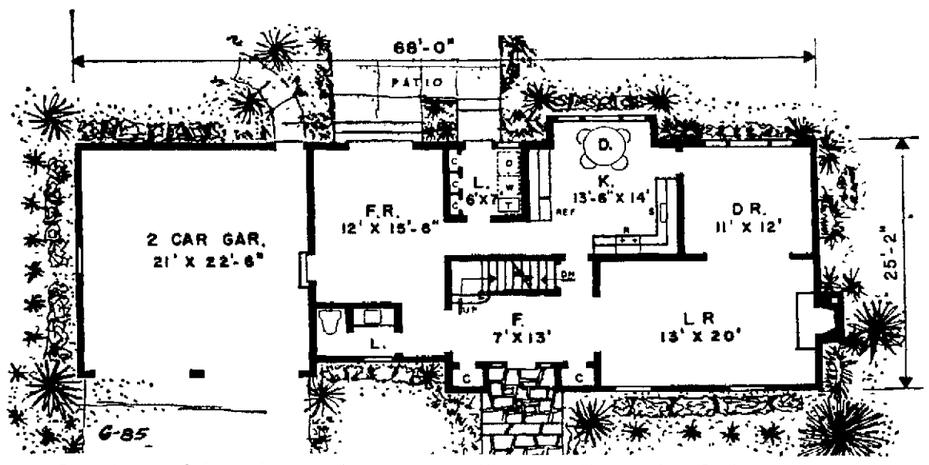
Indoor-outdoor living is brought together by a sliding glass wall, across the back of the family room, opening onto the patio and garden.

The kitchen can be reached from the front foyer, the family room, the dining room and a rear door.

Although the house is Colonial in feeling, the kitchen is functionally present-day in all respects, from its built-in dishwasher to its modern range-and-oven unit.



Location of laundry-mud room typifies excellent circulation pattern.

Mower Safety Tips

Within the U.S., there are 25 million or more portable and highly dangerous missile launching pads.

A rather strange statement to make but if you own a rotary power mower, you are also the owner of one of these missile launchers.

The whirring blades of a power mower can thrust a piece of wood, rock or metal 80 feet or further at 240 m.p.h., according to the National Safety Council.

A U.S. Public Health Survey estimates some 100,000 Americans are injured annually by power mower accidents.

A survey by the National Safety Council found that most power mower accidents happen early in the mowing season and that mishaps with riding or tractor type mowers are more severe.

The Safety Council lists these recommendations:

—Clear the area of children, adults and pets; pick up small objects before you start.

—Avoid wet areas.

Banquet Marks 2 Anniversaries

The state centennial and the 100th anniversary of the development of the hybrid tea rose will be observed at a banquet at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Lindell Palace.

Members of all rose societies in Nebraska have been invited to the state banquet sponsored by Cornhusker and Capital City Rose Societies in Lincoln.

Dr. J. Donald McPike of Muscatine, Ia., will be the featured speaker.

Want The Rocks? Skip The Walks

Two Albuquerque women sympathized with the lazy rockhound and seeded a vacant lot with 100 pounds of pretty, semi-precious and a few precious stones.

For 50 cents anyone can take a garden tool or rock pick and dig round in the loose sand. They might find turquoise, tiger's eyes, agates, rose quartz, apache tears, petrified wood, copper ore, gold ore and fire opal, a precious stone.

"There are more than 100 different types of rocks out there," Mrs. Francis Caldwell said.

"We scattered a bushel basket full of them on top of the ground, buried them in loose sand and hauled in some gravel and mixed them all up," she added. "We have more to put out when most of those are found."

Mrs. Caldwell and her partner, Mrs. Adelaide Resseguie, had been rock hunters and amateur prospectors for years when they decided to combine their collections in one shop. Then they hit on the idea of seeding the lot for beginners and less avid hunters.

Mrs. Caldwell said she also grew roses. "But flowers die. Rocks are beautiful and they were here before we were and will be here after we're all gone," she said.

Your Nurseryman Speaks

Guaranteed Stock Is Bargain

By this time in a spring planting season most nurserymen are cockeyed. One eye is on the ground digging and transplanting plants. The other eye is on the sky watching for any possibility of rain.

Why is there this inordinate interest in the weather? The answer is contained in one word, "guarantee."

Most nursery plants are guaranteed 100 percent if planted by the nursery and 50 percent if planted by the buyer. The exception is potted plants which, since they are actively growing when planted, carry no guarantee.

July Guarantee

Trees and shrubs planted in autumn are guaranteed to July 1 of the following year. Spring plantings are guaranteed to July 1 of the same year.

If the rains do not come and people do not water their plants with consistency, the nurseryman can do a perfect job and yet lose his shirt.

This high percentage guarantee on nursery stock is, in many respects, unique.

When your wife has a baby, does the obstetrician issue even a one-day guarantee? When you buy a pet, do you have assurance that he will be replaced if he dies?

Related Business

In fact, florists, who are in business closely related to nurseries, issue no comparable guarantee in most cases

Moreover the buyers of nursery stock in eastern Nebraska are unusually fortunate. In many other sections of the nation, nurserymen furnish a very low percentage guarantee or absolutely none.

The standard guarantee in Lincoln contains a sentence about "adverse weather condition and obvious neglect." This would seemingly give the nurseryman an excuse for refusing to replace some plants.

Yet, despite tornadoes, drouth, hail, high winds and documented cases of obvious neglect, this sentence has never been used in the seventeen years' experience of this column's writer.

Over 90 percent of the cost of trees and shrubs is labor — propagating, lining out, weeding, spraying, digging. This guarantee was first issued when the cost of labor was one-fifth of what it is today.

Rare Bargain

Obviously, the buyer of nursery stock in eastern Nebraska is getting a bargain rare in these days of inflated prices — and all that your cockeyed nurserymen asks in return is that you please, oh pretty please take care of the plants that you buy.

Buyers of nursery stock have "a good thing going for them" — and as always the case with "good things," they are continued only as long as they are not abused.

Prune Forsythia!

By Emery W. Nelson
County Extension Agent

The time to prune the forsythia bush is immediately after it has bloomed. At this time the cuts heal quickly and the plant strength is used to grow new shoots for next spring's flowers.

Another real advantage in pruning as the leaf buds begin to open is that dead branches are easy to identify. These should be removed to ground level with clean cuts with sharp tools.

The next step in pruning the forsythia bush is to remove the old and woody branches. If a few of the oldest branches are removed each year, the bush will be continually renewed and never become scraggly or coarse.

Look for weak, crowded branches as well. The pruning out of these will force more energy into the desirable branches on the plant.

The last step in pruning this shrub is to reduce the branches to a desirable size. If this can be done by removing some of the branches to maintain the natural shape this type pruning should be done.

Should the bush be badly overgrown, approximately one half of the branches can be removed The new branches will soon grow to provide for a natural shape again

tional pride. Even worse is for a woman to pretend she even noticed

Airline offices, hotels and travel bureaus — besieged with queries from women travelers — now usually include an explanation of what to expect when a stranger makes his feelings known.

One such brochure, titled "Spain for Americans," notes that the natives have "an inborn flair and talent at the sight of ladies" for "attractive words."

It advises "Except in rare cases of mental illness —which occur all over the world — the admiration of your admirer is disinterested, platonic and pure."

The summer tourist influx may present a new twist.

A spokesman whose hotel is on the famed Paseo de la Castellana — Madrid's embassy row — said: "We've noticed that the American boys are picking it up, the Frenchmen too The last couple of women who came in here fussing said the men who whispered to them weren't Spanish at all."

OUR NEW AGE

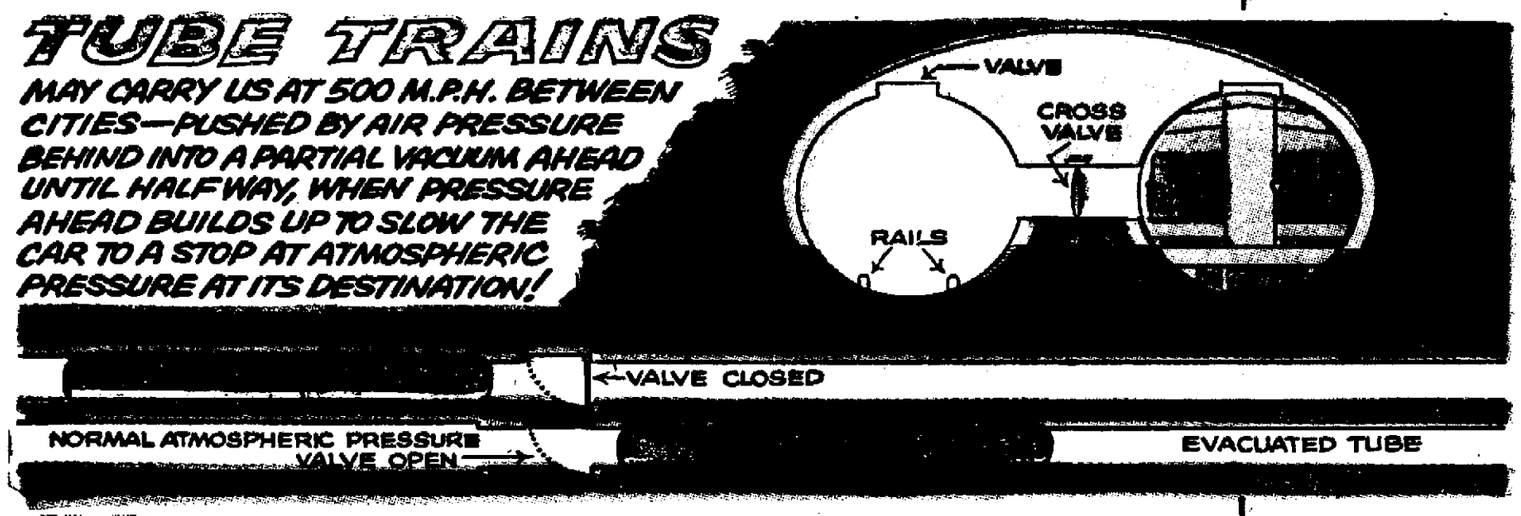
LONDON ONCE HAD 60 MILES OF PNEUMATIC TUBES TO SPEED MESSAGES BETWEEN POST OFFICES—THEY'RE STILL USED IN LIBRARIES AND STORES.

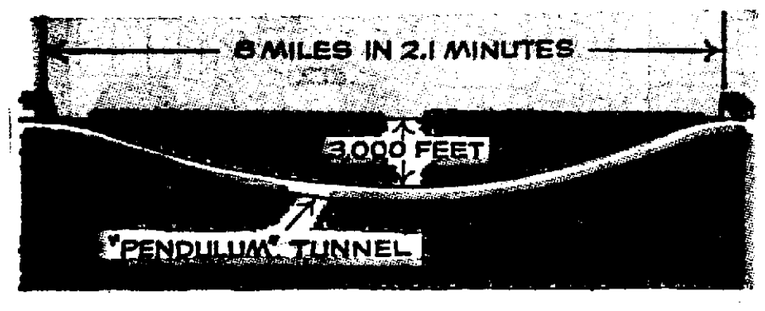
TUBE TRAINS

MAY CARRY US AT 500 M.P.H. BETWEEN CITIES—PUSHED BY AIR PRESSURE BEHIND INTO A PARTIAL VACUUM AHEAD UNTIL HALFWAY, WHEN PRESSURE AHEAD BUILDS UP TO SLOW THE CAR TO A STOP AT ATMOSPHERIC PRESSURE AT ITS DESTINATION!



UNDERGROUND TUNNELS, WHILE COSTLY TO BUILD, WOULD BE WEATHER-FREE, CONSTANT IN TEMPERATURE, EASY TO MAINTAIN, AND USE NO EXPENSIVE RIGHT OF WAY.

WITH "VACUUM TUNNELS" ARCHING DOWN NEARLY 4000 FEET AND UP TO THE SURFACE AGAIN, THE MOTORLESS CAR WOULD GAIN SPEED TO THE LOWEST POINT, THEN COAST UP TO STOP AT THE NEXT STATION LIKE A CHILD'S SWING.



WITH A SMALL AIR PRESSURE PUSH, THE SWING TRIP—8 MILES IN 2 TO 3 MINUTES...PHILADELPHIA TO NEW YORK IN 13 MINUTES—WOULD GIVE ALMOST NO SENSATION OF ACCELERATION OR BREAKING BECAUSE THE TRAIN WOULD MAINLY COAST DOWN AND UP USING THE FREE PROPULSION OF GRAVITY!
